THE DAY THE LIGHTS WENT OFF IN PALERMO

PALERMO, Sicily (UPI) — The federal electric company turned off the lights at city hall today because the city is overdue on its hydro bill to the tune of $1.3 million. Or is it $4.25 million?

Palermo, chronically debt-ridden, disputes the higher figure decided on by a civil court, but cannot prove its case because so many of the bills have been lost.

An aide said Mayor Giacomo Marchello, whose office is in the dark, was "displeased by what has happened."

B.C. Unemployment Up, National Figures Down

Times News Services

Unemployment in British Columbia jumped last month to eight per cent of the provincial labor force. Elsewhere it declined.

Figures released by Statistics Canada Monday show 76,000 people without jobs in this province, compared with 71,000 in April and sharply up from 61,000 in May of last year.

The figures do not include people temporarily out-of-work because of labor disputes.

According to these latest figures, B.C. with 10.1 per cent of the country's population, has 13.7 per cent of the nation's unemployed.

While the national figures are a marked improvement from April when there were 592,000 people unemployed, the 40,000 removed from the list represents a smaller decline than usual for this time of year when construction and industry normally shift into high gear.

As a result, the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate — which is weighted to take seasonal job fluctuations into account — rose to 6.2 per cent of the labor force for May from 5.8 per cent in April.

The seasonally-adjusted trend has been inconsistent throughout 1972.

The year started with a seasonally-adjusted rate of 6.2 per cent in January, which dropped to 5.8 per cent in February, climbed again to 6.0 per cent in March, then fell to 5.8 per cent in April and bounced back up to 6.2 per cent for May.

The actual rate of unemployment for May — unadjusted to fit into this trend formula — was also 6.2 per cent, down from the unadjusted rate of 6.8 per cent in April and 6.3 per cent in May of last year.

The highest seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in recent years was recorded in September of last year when it hit 6.9 per cent of the national labor force.

One positive aspect of the May report was that the number of hard-core unemployed declined both in absolute and seasonally-adjusted terms.

There were 106,000 persons who had been out of work for seven months or longer in the middle of May, compared to 117,000 in April and 126,000 in May, 1971.

In seasonally-adjusted terms, this hard-core group showed a considerable improvement, while the number unemployed for six months or less climbed.

The number of unemployed youthful workers — under age 25 — rose to 269,000 in May from 251,000 in April. It was 270,000 in May last year.

There was a sharp improvement in the unemployment picture for mature workers, particularly men. The number of unemployed men aged 25 and over declined to 219,000 from 270,000 in April.

SOCREDS ALSO VIOLATE ACT

B.C.'s Social Credit League appears to be in a similar situation to the B.C. Teachers' Federation with regard to contravention of the provincial Societies Act. (See Page 2).

A. H. Hall, registrar of companies, said it is the fact that the BCTF uses delegates to do its business at annual meetings and regular meetings that makes its actions contrary to the Societies Act and an amendment to it passed by the legislature in 1961.

George Driediger, Social Credit League president, said from Abbotsford today the Social Credit League also uses delegates to do its business at annual meetings.

Driediger said about 500 delegates usually attend the annual meetings, representing members of local associations who he said obviously number more than 500.

The 1961 amendment to the Societies Act stipulates that the number of non-voting members — and this would apply to those members of an organization who do not attend the annual meeting — shall not exceed the number of voting members — those who do attend the annual meeting.

The Social Credit League file in the registry of companies shows the most recent report as that for 1970.

Names of directors are listed and the number of voting members is listed as eight and the number of non-voting members zero.

Premier Bennett is listed as one of the eight directors of the body, along with Driediger. Bennett's occupation is listed as "premier."

Flood Levels at Record Peak

Times News Services

Flood levels reached the peak of the century today as exhausted volunteers in Kamloops continued efforts to hold back the waters of the raging North Thompson River, which threatens to inundate some 500 homes.

Further North at Prince George, the swollen Nechako River overflowed its banks early today and the Fraser River was four inches above flood level, forcing evacuation of an estimated 150 families from low-lying areas.

Around the Kamloops area, several other communities in the Thompson Valley were threatened by the rising flood waters and scores of families were evacuated Monday from low-lying ground along the North and South Thompson rivers.

Hundreds of cattle were marooned along a 60-mile section of the valley and were in danger of drowning as river waters closed in around them.

Roads and railway lines were also affected, with the Kamloops-Edmonton highway closed and intermittent washouts occuring along passenger and freight rail routes in the interior.

The battle against flood waters was in the crucial stage today in Kamloops as thousands of volunteers hauled sandbags and employed heavy trucks loaded with rockfill to reinforce dikes along the river's edge.

The dikes have so far held back the Thompson, which is swollen by rain and mountain runoff, and civil defence workers are hopeful the dikes will continue to hold against the raging flood, which they expect to peak later today.

Kamloops radio stations advertised today for Manpower to work on dikes and all available personnel were directed to trouble spots by volunteers manning round-the-clock

Barrett Blames WAC for 'Fear'

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett today charged Premier Bennett with deliberately creating the "atmosphere" of fear which resulted in a physical attack on cabinet ministers in New Westminster last Wednesday.

Barrett said he is personally satisfied that the violence was "spontaneous" and not prearranged by any organization.

The NDP leader charged that the premier "thrives on strife, conflict and confrontation."

He called Bennett's policy one of "hating people and groups" because Bennett finds it a "useful political weapon" with which to fight for his waning personal political power.

At least one cabinet minister was injured when the cabinet ran a gauntlet of swinging placards outside the Royal Towers Hotel following a cabinet meeting at which a back-to-work order was decreed.

Bennett said later the province will not be governed by what he called "mob rule" of the kind demonstrated in the incident.

Barrett today called that a "fatuous statement."

He said he had made at least two personal enquiries from sources he would not reveal, and declared he was "personally satisfied that there was no conscious plan for that violence.

25% Families Earn Less Than $5,000–MacEachen

By ERIC DOWNTON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Almost a quarter of Canada's families exist on incomes of below $5,000 a year according to the most recently available government statistics, the Commons was informed Monday.

In written replies to questions from Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey-White Rock) Privy Council president Allan MacEachen said 24.8 per cent of Canadian families had incomes less than $5,000 yearly, while 66.6 per cent received less than $10,000 yearly.

These figures included income from investments and government transfer payments as well as income from employment, MacEachen said. The most recent figures available on incomes were for 1969.

Mather had also asked if the government had information on the estimated income which would provide a modest but adequate Canadian standard of living for a family of four.

NO CONCEPT

"There is no existing official statistical concept of poverty in Canada," MacEachen replied.

"However, Statistics Canada has established low-income cut-offs which have been used to delineate low-income families from other units. For a family of four, in 1969, the income cutoff was set at $4,420.

"In its report, the Special Senate Committee on Poverty has recommended that basic allowance rates be set initially at $3,500 for a family of four," MacEachen stated.

RANGE LISTED

"Among provincially established social assistance programs in January 1972 the annual rate of benefits for a family of four ranged from $2,604 in Nova Scotia to $3,252 in Ontario.

"Also, under the proposed Family Income Security Plan, a family of four, depending on whether there are two or

NEWS BRIEFS

Long Strike Ends

MONTREAL (CP) — Striking manual employees of the City of Montreal have voted to return to work, ending a month-long strike over contract demands. The vote to return raised hopes of a quick cleanup of garbage rotting in emergency dumps around the city.

Wolves Reprieved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon has cancelled an order for more than a quarter-million parka hoods lined with wolf fur in an effort to save North America's vanishing timber wolves. The timber wolf is on the United States government's list of endangered species.

Reports Conflict

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel reported that its American-made F-4 Phantoms shot down two Egyptian MiG-21s in a dogfight over the Mediterranean Sea today. But Cairo said the victory was by the Egyptians and that two Israeli planes were downed.

GOLD MAKES COMEBACK

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold jumped $2 — to $63.75 at the opening of Europe's free bullion markets today, apparently headed back to last week's record high. The United States dollar slumped to its floor level in Paris and moved down in other foreign exchanges.

Aid Cut Off

MORE U.K. TROOPS

BELFAST (UPI) — Militant Protestants put five demands to Britain today as their price for calling off a threatened showdown with British troops that could spark the worst violence yet in Northern Ireland.

The Irish Republican Army stepped up its bombing campaign today in a resurgence of violence that has claimed 12 lives in the past week.

William Whitelaw, the secretary of state for Northern Ireland, reacted to the increased turmoil by announcing he was sending another battalion of 550 British troops to Northern Ireland to bring the total there to more than 15,000.

The IRA, today also offered to call a one week ceasefire if Whitelaw would meet them to discuss a peace plan.

Among the Protestant demands are that U.K. troops invade IRA "no go" areas in Londonderry and the IRA barricades be smashed. Whitelaw is to meet the Protestants later today.

Ottawa $ Heading West

OTTAWA (CP) — Supply Minister James Richardson plans to spread annual government expenditures of almost $1 billion to give Atlantic and Western Canada a bigger piece of the action.

During the budget debate in the Commons Monday, the minister said his new policy is designed to reduce the concentration of government spending in Ontario and Quebec.

National spending in the Atlantic provinces would jump to 10 per cent from six and in the West to 27 per cent from 10.

The policy has yet to be approved by cabinet but it is unlikely the minister would announce it if he was not assured of approval.

Richardson spoke on the fifth of the six days of debate on the budget introduced by Finance Minister John Turner May 8.

Richardson said his new policy follows a budget suggestion national unity has "a great deal to do with equality of opportunity" for Canadians. His new policy would promote equality for those who wanted to sell to the government.

His policy had three objectives:

—Tendered prices would be for the point of manufacture rather than the point of delivery as a present, eliminating the transportation advantage of central Canadian producers shipping to Ottawa.

Richardson, a former Winnipeg investment dealer, said Quebec and Ontario now supply about 84 per cent of government needs.

The object of the new policy was to reduce spending in Quebec to 25 per cent from 40 and in Ontario to 35 per cent from the present 44 per cent.

Jetliner Damaged

Times News Services

DETROIT — Passengers and crew of an American Airlines DC-10 had a hair-raising brush with death Monday night when a cargo door popped open at 12,000 feet.

The jetliner, flying between Los Angeles and New York, managed to land safely at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport although the huge jet ran off a runway during the emergency landing.

All 56 passengers and 11 crew members escaped serious injury.

The "decompression explosion" was at first attributed to a bomb but subsequent investigation by FBI made it clear there was no evidence of an explosive device being aboard.

An airline official, George A. Warde, said in a statement the cargo door below the passenger cabin opened after the plane left Detroit although signal lights in the cockpit indicated all doors were closed and latched normally.

Teacher Group Illegal— Gov't Report

A report that throws into doubt "all the actions" in recent years of the British Columbia Teachers Federation was released Monday by Attorney General Leslie Peterson.

The report, written for Peterson by companies registrar A. H. Hall, claims that the BCTF's failure to change its structure following Societies Act amendments in 1961 means meetings have been held illegally, officers were elected illegally, and voting was carried out by unqualified people.

Peterson indicated that he views the situation seriously, though he gave no hint of action he might take.

Asked if the infractions were minor, the attorney general replied: "not hardly."

Peterson said the report "brings into question all of the actions of the British Columbia Teachers Federation in recent years."

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett called Peterson's release of the memorandum an "inanely childish" act.

He said Hall had "obviously been instructed by the attorney-general to be mischievious" and added that he was "embarrassed and sorry" for Hall because he had been used for political purposes.

Barrett said he wished Peterson had shown similar diligence in investigating the Commonwealth Trust Company financial collapse, the Fred Quilt death, the Kaiser coal "inside trading" deal, and the report that an RCMP officer said "Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi drove like a 'bloody maniac' during the recent cabinet tour of the province.

The four-page memorandum says essentially that voting and meetings of the B.C.T.F have been held outside the provisions of governing laws since March 27,1961.

Hall's report says "As the membership of the association grew it should have reorganized so as to operate within the law."

Hall said it is his opinion that the BCTF should "without delay call a special meeting of its members, and by members I do not mean only the delegates and representatives, to amend the association's bylaws so that they comply with the Societies Act."

He said he is sending a copy of the memorandum to the BCTF for that organization's "comment" before officially considering it.

It opens: "As a result of recent publicity in the press, on the radio and television in regard to the recent annual meeting of the BCTF, it has been brought to my attention that the association is still using the delegate system of voting and has not amended its bylaws to comply with the 1961 amendment to the Societies Act.

"I am therefore writing this memorandum to you pursuant to Section 53 of the said statute as, in my opinion, the affairs of that association, which I will hereafter refer to as the BCTF, are not being conducted in proper manner."

Hall says the Societies Act does not provide for delegate voting. Apparently the Co-operative Associations Act does allow for delegate voting."

The Societies Act allows proxy voting, Hall said, "but the delegate system of voting should not be confused with proxy voting."

An amendment to the Societies Act in 1961 required that the number of non-voting members at meetings should not exceed the number of voting members.

"According to the BCTF annual report of the 1971 April meeting, which report was not filed in my office until over seven months later on November 29, 1971, the number of voting members is shown as 22,944 and the number of non-voting members 1,328.

"However, it would appear 22,944 members were not given an opportunity to vote at the general meeting unless they were designated delegates or geographical representatives from geographical districts."

Hall continues to say that his reading of the Societies Act indicates that every member of the society should have been allowed to vote on matters placed before annual and special general meetings.

He also said that at the 1972 general meeting, "I understand that only approximately 650 delegates and representatives ... were given this right."

"... the fact that there is such a large number of persons within the association and entitled to vote pursuant to the Societies Act does not allow the association to ignore the statute. As the membership of the association grew, it should have reorganized so as to operate within the law."

"I submit the law is that the Societies Act requires that, subject to the bylaws, all members have a vote and that the non-voting members shall not be more in number than the voting members, that annual meetings be held each year at which any voting member may attend, and that the majority required to pass an extra-ordinary resolution is two-thirds or three-fourths ... of the voting members present.

"It appears that since the amendment to Section 23 on March 27, 1961, the annual general meetings have been held contra the statute and that the extraordinary resolutions submitted at these meeting were not duly passed pursuant to Sections 2 and 24 of the statute, but by unqualified persons."

"I further suggest that the BCTF should take into consideration the advisability of petitioning the legislature at the next session for a bill to legalize the business of the association and its offices since March 27, 1961, and that if the teachers consider that the delegate system of voting, permits sufficient expression of the wishes of the membership, a petition for a charter to the legislature should be made by way of a private bill so that the association could operate outside the requirements and jurisdiction of the Societies Act."

emergency flood-control centres.

At the Oak Hills subdivision near Kamloops, where 500 persons were evacuated when a dike broke June 2, there was major seepage, though pumps capable of removing millions of gallons of water a day were still working.

In the suburb of Dallas, 2,000 persons were on a limited water supply because the water board was forced Monday night to de-activate one of two pumps in the flooded pumphouse.

BUSINESS AREA HIT

Serious flooding was also reported at Sicamous, 50 miles east of Kamloops, where a two-block business section was inundated by up to three feet of water after spilling over a canal linking Shuswap and Mara lakes.

At Grande Prairie in Alberta, Mayor Elmer Borstad today declared a state of emergency in this city of 14,000 as flood waters, rising at one foot an hour, inundated the water treatment plant.

The plant was shut down and the mayor imposed strict water rationing, prohibited all "non-essential use of water and shut down a meat packing plant that is a heavy user of municipal water. Most other industries continued operations using their own wells.

The main highway from Edmonton to Grande Prairie was closed today when the Smoky River overflowed its bank.

VALLEY BRACED

The Okanogan Valley braced for renewed high water while streams in the Entiat Valley, hit Saturday by flash flooding, began to fall.

The U.S. Corps of Engineers predicted the Okanogan would crest just under the level that tore through the north-central Washington valley less than two weeks ago and caused an estimated $7 million damage.

"The people have been working feverishly to get the dikes built up, a sheriff's deputy said. "Now its a matter of waiting, watching and patrolling the dikes.

"We're still patrolling the Okanogan in rowboats. He estimated water still stood between four and five feet deep in some streets of Okanogan and Omak after earlier flooding said to be the worst in 80 years.

EVACUATION

Meanwhile, Chelan County authorities double-checked back along the Entiat Valley and near Lake Chelan to see whether there were residents and campers still stranded after the weekend flash flooding.

Twenty-five persons were evacuated from the along the Entiat by helicopter. They were isolated when the thundering water washed out the valleys access road.

Four persons still were unaccounted for Monday.

BURIAL SERVICES

Individual graveside services will be conducted for the identified victims who died late Friday and early Saturday when rain-swollen Rapid Creek erupted through this city of 43,000 persons in the shadows of the Black Hills.

"The services will probably go fro at least a week," said a funeral director. A mass memorial service is scheduled Sunday at a local high school.

The Omaha, Neb., World-seedin Herald says that two cloud-seeding experiments were conducted Friday in the Rapid City area, one of them about 5 p.m., an hour before the devastating rains began.

Building Trades Nearer Crunch

Half the unions in the B.C. construction industry have tentative or ratified agreements, but there was no sign of a break today with the other half in the six-week lockout-strike.

A government return-to-work order, combined with compulsory arbitration of the outstanding disputes, takes effect at 8 a.m. Wednesday. It was officially signed by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson Monday.

Ratified new contracts — painters, two locals of the glaziers, two locals of the plasterers, Vancouver Island sheet metal workers.

PLASTERERS SETTLE

Unsettled — carpenters, plumbers, electrical workers, operating engineers, boilermakers, Victoria floorlayers, heat-frost insulators, ironworkers, mainland sheet metal workers.

Key unions are regarded as the plumbers, electrical workers and carpenters.

One industry source said "When that works itself out, we will be home free — or in confrontation."

Latest ratified settlements involves Locals 779 (Mainland) and 450 (Vancouver Island) of the plasterers union. The package settlement was worth $1.05 over two years, of which 96 cents will come in wage increases in four stages. Current hourly wage is $6.20.

Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for 840 contractors, said it will obey the back to work order and lift the lockout it imposed on 18 unions April 28.

DIFFERENT FIGURES

The B.C. and Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council, representing the unions, has said unions without contracts will not obey the order.

CLRA has said that 30,000 workers were affected by the lockout, but the unions said the figure was closer to 6,000.

At a press conference Monday, Labor Minister James Chabot said 800 copies of the 50-page government back to work order are being distributed.

Chabot said the additional week given to the construction industry to settle its disputes was ample time.

He added that Jim Kinnaird, head of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, told him seven days would be enough time in which to resolve differences.

"So in view of their request, we have granted the additional time.

OUTSTANDING ISSUES

Chabot said that the issues outstanding between some of the unions and the construction association have boiled down mainly to wages and fringe benefits.

He said that the two sides have come as close as 15 to 25 cents.

He added that if they go back to work, "I would hope that when they go back they would give preferential treatment to hospitals and schools (construction).

PEPSI PERKS NIXON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of Pepsi Cola and the political committee of the largest stock brokerage firm in the United States lead the list of publicly reported contributors to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

"But the names of hundreds of other wealthy backers who may have kicked in far more remain buried from public view in the files of the Washington-based Finance Committee to Re-elect the President.

Contributions of $15,000 apiece from Pepsi President Donald M. Kendall and the Effective Government Assocf ation of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith were the largest Nixon donations listed in reports to the General Accounting Office.

... SOCRED LEAGUE

The BCTF file shows the 1971 report as the most recent. It lists 22,944 members as voting members and 1,328 as non-voting members. However, Hall said the problem is that publicity of BCTF meetings recently made him aware that nowhere near 22,000 delegates attend the meetings.

Therefore, he said, the BCTF is using the delegate system, which is now allowed for a society to stay in good standing.

Hall also said that since the Social Credit League has not filed its report for 1971, it is not a society in good standing.

He said that if the situation exists for two years, the society is notified of the fact and reports are required.

Asked if it seemed correct to him that the Social Credit League would have only eight members, Hall said they probably have more, but that for the purposes of his job, he goes by what the society files in its report.

Hall said the Social Credit League has also neglected to include in its file its extraordinary resolutions and bylaws.

The registrar said there was no initiation on anyone else's part but his own that the BCTF situation came to light. He said that due to the publicity surrounding BCTF's recent actions, he felt obligated to report on the situation to the attorney-general as the Societies Act requires.

The same situation that the BCTF is in now, he said, applies to any organization using the delegate system in voting, if they are incorporated as societies.

Not all the political parties are incorporated, he said. There was no file available for the Liberal, Progressive Conservative or New Democratic Party organizations in the registry.

Hall said he is not required under the Societies Act to report the Social Credit League situation to the attorney-general since the Social Credit League does not come under the same category as the BCTF. This involves the establishment of trust funds and other mutual uses of money.

Hall said any decisions on action are up to the attorney-general, and that it is merely his job to report the situation of organizations contravening the Societies Act to the minister.

three children, will receive full benefits where family income is less than $5,000 or $5,500 respectively."

Health Minister John Munro stated in a written reply Monday to questions from Doug Stewart (Liberal—Okanagan-Kootenay) that as of January this year 1,759,036 Canadians were receiving old-age security payments.

"However, increases in benefits under the guaranteed supplement effective April 1, 1971, brought expenditures close to $525 million for the fiscal year 1971-72, Munro stated.

In 1970-71 expenditures on old-age security pension benefits and the guaranteed income supplement were 12.71 per cent of the total federal budgetary and non-budgetary expenditures on a national accounts basis.

"These expenditures for 1972-73 are estimated at $2,555 million, which represents 13.45 per cent of estimated federal budgetary and non-budgetary expenditures for that year, Munro's reply stated.

CHINA RAPS RUSSIA, U.S.

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — China wants the key document at the United Nations Environment Conference to label the United States and the Soviet Union as responsible for the destruction of the human environment in the Third World, conference sources said today.

The Chinese also keep insisting — against U.S. opposition — that the Indochina conflict cannot be ignored by the conference, the sources said.

The Chinese proposals, more than 10 in all, were described by Western diplomats as the main obstacles to agreement among the 114 participating nations on the declaration on the human environment.

The declaration has been billed as the most important item expected to emerge from the 11-day conference.

The U.S. and other Western nations cannot accept the Chinese proposals to change the carefully worded document, the sources said.

A special working group, set up at the request of China to re-examine the document, sat in closed session today for the fourth consecutive day, grappling with 46 suggested changes in the 1,000-word text, the sources said.

In a night session, stretching into this morning, the working group heard another Chinese attack on the United States, they said.

The Chinese delegate also suggested, the sources said, that the declaration blames "the superpowers — China's description of the United States and the Soviet Union — for creating the pollution in developing nations.

In earlier meetings, Chinese delegates put forward the idea that developed nations should pay over-all emopensation to the developing nations for polluting their environment.

A key principle in the draft declaration is the one making one country responsible for acts which pollute the environment of another country.

Opposition Lambastes 'Gag' on Press

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government's intention is to ban paid political advertisements or announcements only in newspapers on voting day and on the day immediately preceding polling day, government sources have explained, after the "gag" section in the bill to amend the Canada Election Act came under criticism in the Commons.

The government has no intention of prohibiting news stories or comment in the form of editorials.

This was what Government House leader Allan MacEachen meant when he told the House that the government's purpose had been to apply the same treatment to the print media as now applies to the radio and television broadcasting business, sources said.

If the proposed amending section is badly worded and would in effect ban news stories and editorial comment, MacEachen has indicated the government would be receptive to "reasonable changes" being made in the committee stage.

He said, "changes can be made in the committee because the purpose, really, is to give effect to recommendation No. 25 of the special committee."

The special committee recommended that the existing restriction on political broadcasts on voting day and the day preceding be extended to newspapers.

The Broadcasting Act now prohibits radio or TV stations from broadcasting programs, advertisements or announcement of a partisan character on voting day or the day before.

The new bill which would apply the "gag" to newspapers has now received second reading and has been referred to the Commons committee on privileges and elections.

That committee will meet soon on the bill. The government want it passed before the Commons rises at the end of June.

MacEachen has indicated to oppositon parties that the government hopes to have Parliament complete its pre-summer business this month and go on vacation at the end of the month, allowing MPs to return to their constituencies for the summer.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis, having now had a chance to examine the amending bill more closely, jumped to the defence of newspapers in the House.

Both suggested that the bill was a "rush affair" having been hurriedly drafted and rammed into the House because Prime Minister Peirre Trudeau had taken a "public razzing" for not honoring a commitment he made in 1968 to give election expenses legislation top priority.

Stanfield scoffed at the section banning "artisan political articles, editorial, advertisements or announcements" in newspapers on polling day or the day preceding.

He asked what the restriction meant. He asked if it meant there can be no interpretative news stories about the crucial, final moments of a campaign.

"Of course the government might say that this is not its intention, but that is not good enough. In legislation, intentions do not count—words count," said Stanfield. Lewis was even tougher in his criticism. He pointed out that there was a difference between the electronic media and the print media.

He doubted that radio or TV stations were overly interested in selling election broadcasts on Saturday and Sunday, the days preceding a Monday election.

Union Blamed by Cote For Postal Talks Delay

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Postmaster General Jean-Pierre Cote revealed for the first time Monday that union officials representing some 24,000 post office workers suddenly decided not to attend a negotiating meeting "at the last minute" last week.

Cote made the admission in the Commons after questions about the state of contract negotiations had been raised by Manitoba MP Walter Dinsdale (PC-Brandon-Souris).

Dinsdale pointed out that it has now been more than two months since the postal workers contract with the government had expired.

He wanted to know what progress had been made in negotiations.

It was then that Cote told him that the union had suddenly cancelled the last scheduled negotiating meeting. Another is scheduled for Wednesday.

The cabinet minister also confirmed that the government has not made a new offer to the postal workers following one rejected out of hand by them on May 19.

In that offer, the government proposed some regional pay scales which meant post office workers in certain parts of the country would earn less than some of their fellow workers.

Cote said post office officials are currently awaiting a union demand.

Dinsdale has said he believes the government wants the post office workers to go on strike so that the government can then move in to "solve" the crisis and use the action as another election issue.

Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) said ethnic groups had been protesting, some for some time, "oppressive and discriminatory" high postal rates charged for their newspapers and publications.

Probe of N.W. Protest

Last week's demonstration against provincial cabinet ministers in New Westminster will be investigated by police — without extra instructions from Attorney General Leslie Peterson.

Peterson made the announcement Monday, adding he hopes police treat the demonstration the same as they would any other that involves violence and citizens of the province.

Agricultural Minister Cyril Shelford suffered a broken shoulder bone after demonstrators struck him with a two-by-four in New Westminster last Thursday.

Peterson said charges should be laid if there is evidence to identify individuals concerned with the violence, but the case will not be treated in any special way.

Angered Parents Hold Fire

Cobble Hill parents are angered but "holding their fire" to hear the results of a special Cowichan school board meeting following an accident Monday when nine-year-old Lorraine Powell was struck by a half-ton truck on her way to school.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Powell is in fair condition in Queen Victoria Hospital with fractures of the skull and pelvis after the truck, driven by Morris Dougan, 37, also of Cobble Hill, was unable to stop when a group of children ran across the Trans-Canada Highway to catch a school bus.

Parents in the area have been concerned for several months about the danger of their children crossing the highway to get to school.

"No facilities are provided for children on the east side of the highway," said one parent, Mrs. Terry Bruce, "and all the schools are on the west side.

"So all the kids have to run across a 60-miles-per-hour highway to catch a bus or just to walk to school."

The highway in the area, 11 miles south of Duncan, is being widened to four lanes and there is no crosswalk for the children.

Stop It Right Now

Union officials are having a hard job to dissociate themselves from the disreputable incidents that marred Premier Bennett's provincial tour at several stopping points, notably New Westminster. While it is hardly to be believed that union officials would encourage hoodlums to jostle and even use clubs on the cabinet ministers, the fact remains that a number of men, using violence as a political weapon, were ostensibly members of the organized protest groups.

When officials organize a public demonstration — a lawful and acceptable undertaking — they must take responsibility for what happens as a result of the demonstration, and this applies particularly to violence even though the organizers do not foment it. It is no excuse to walk away from the incident and disclaim any connection with it; it is not a mitigating circumstance that the hoodlums were transients or loaded with beer. The facts are that they were there, they made themselves part of a planned group protest against the government's labor policy, and they used force on elected government representatives.

Such a trend should be halted right now. There is no room in this country for the tactics of the mobster, and particularly so in our political life. Regardless of one's opinion as to the wisdom of government policy, hitting a cabinet minister with a two-by-four when he cannot even defend himself is a demonstration, not of political ability, but of cowardice and muscle-bound boneheadedness.

There should be every effort made to seek out such bully-boys and charge them under the law. And one of the best means of ensuring that this country does not degenerate into a state in which public officials are subject to personal physical attack is to build a strong public opinion that will not tolerate such actions on any pretext or under any circumstances. Leading that public opinion should be the trade union officials and members. They have the most to lose through the erosion of laws designed to protect the individual.

Cars and People

In his recent address in Vancouver a high official of the U.S. Transportation Department gave clear evidence of the trend in North American thinking on automobiles. Mr. John Hirten stressed the need to bring public considerations into view in planning thoroughfares, and to give local governments the lion's share in local transportation planning.

The private automobile, he pointed out, is inefficient, costly and produces pollution. To remedy the defects of the car Mr. Hirten opted for public control over vehicle design and an over-all policy for transportation planning. He urged the right of the cities to make basic transportation decisions affecting them and to have readily available funds from senior governments for these purposes.

The tradition of local government is perhaps stronger in the U.S. than here and it may be some time before our particular brand of federalism produces an equitable governmental process in which the cities can play a larger part. Canadians, however, can agree with Mr. Hirten's suggestion that the automobile — whether bus, truck or private car — has a public impact which will make it increasingly a subject of public policy.

An Ice-Free Arctic?

As the prospect of heavy oil tanker traffic looms ever darker on Canada's Pacific horizon, a recent forecast by Bernt Balchen, Norwegian-born naturalized American who enjoys high credibility as an Arctic specialist, may focus renewed attention on the seas off this country's northern coast and archipelago.

Continuation of the warming trend over the polar ice cap, says Balchen, could render the Arctic an ice-free ocean by the end of this century — a scant 28 years hence. That could lead to heavy traffic through those waters, making more feasible the routes which the Manhattan proved possible a year ago. Shipping would be concerned with minerals, oil and any other raw resources which could be carried economically.

"Calculations indicate that if the southernmost pack ice were to disappear, the Arctic Ocean surface temperature in the coldest months would be about 42 degrees Fahrenheit, and the pack ice cover would not form again," Mr. Balchen says.

The effect on the North American climate would be highly important, leading to heavier snowfalls in Alaska, northern Canada and other regions including the Soviet Union, and assuring cold winters for those areas.

Such developments appear predicated on a continuation of the warming trend over the North Pole — a trend which if not certain, is still a possibility. The implications for Canada are significant: the need to nail down this nation's jurisdiction over territories it already claims and to strengthen defences against ecological hazards which heavier traffic would create.

MAURICE WESTERN

Against the Right to Strike

OTTAWA — There is sometimes a startling difference between what people think and what governments, or those who profess to speak for people, think they think.

More and more members of Parliament in the Trudeau years have sought, through the device of surveys, to read the minds of their constituents. Whether they should necessarily be guided by such returns, and in what degree, is an old question which need not be considered here. The point is that the answers, quite often a shock to the members concerned, sometimes cast much doubt on theories uncritically accepted as justification for government legislation.

By far the largest concentration of civil servants is to be found in the Ottawa area. It has been apparent for some time that many in the public service are apprehensive about programs for implementing bilingual policies. When the issue was recently brought to a boil by remarks of John Carson, chairman of the Public Service Commission, two Ottawa Liberal members, Gordon Blair and Lloyd Francis, decided to release preliminary results of questionnaires then circulating in their constituencies.

Index of Discontent

The polls were of primary interest in revealing the degree of discontent with the linguistic programs. Even Mr. Blair and Mr. Francis, both known for their criticisms of these policies as they have been recently implemented, were presumably taken aback by the strength of the protest. But the questions were not limited to language matters and some of the information gathered may be of wider interest to people outside the service.

There is no lack of evidence that the public is becoming very resentful of strikes in the public service. This is to be expected; they often cause great economic loss and widespread inconvenience to people with no responsibility whatever for the grievances, legitimate or otherwise, of which the participants complain.

It might appear unlikely, however, that such views, common among outsiders, would be shared by people within the service. When Parliament rewrote the legislation during the Pearson era, the right to strike was justifed by an argument of equity. What was sauce for employees of private enterprise ought to be sauce for persons working for government. Although many civil servants at the time indicated a preference for the course of arbitration, the union leaders seemed to regard this as a temporary situation.

Since that time they have defended the right to strike with much passion and never, to my knowledge, have they suggested that their views on the subject might not be shared by those whose interests they profess to represent.

GORDON BLAIR, MP

Ottawa West is a civil service constituency. One of the questions asked by Mr. Francis was: "Should public servants have the right to strike?" The question is not ambiguous; it is difficult to see how it could be misunderstood. The results admittedly are only partial — 1080 replies — but they are presumably representative. Mr. Francis describes them as "probably indicative of the mood of the constituents." They are remarkably emphatic.

Of those answering, 9 per cent felt that they had no basis for an opinion. The remainder voted 22 per cent Yes and 69 per cent No. In other words more than three to one opposed the strike right. Since the civil servants, in the middle of a row over bilingualism, had a particular reason for returning their ballots, there is good reason to take this as a fair expression of the prevailing view. It follows either that the theory on which Parliament acted in the 1960s was wrong or else that it has become wrong, with actual experience of the legislation.

Scattered Reactions

In contrast to this response, a number of other much discussed questions — marijuana, abortions, cigarette advertising, a federal district — provoked much more scattered expressions of view. Pollution control was one exception, but it is like motherhood; at least in principle everyone is for it.

On some subjects, very strong, and, by implication, highly critical opinions emerged. Citizens were asked whether the federal government should take more or less action on a number of matters. The count shows 74 per cent favoring price controls and 67 per cent wage controls, as against 8 and 9 per cent respectively. In the middle were those satisfied with present policy. Similarly 79 per cent demanded more or much more action on inflation, as against 5 opposed and 16 per cent for the present policies.

These are interesting reactions; further indications that citizens generally are much more favorably disposed towards price-wage controls than the government appears to be. But they may not be quite so significant as the public service issues which are of special concern to Ottawa West. On these, the results are jolting and in at least one respect surprising for in the poll conducted by Mr. Francis the vote against strikes in the public service was even more emphatic than the heavy condemnation of current policies on bilingualism.

The Indigestible Waffle

TORONTO — The 300-member Provincial Council of the Ontario NDP will vote later this month on a recommendation to "dissolve" the Waffle, the ultra-socialist, ultra-nationalist wing, group or movement — call it what you will — led by Professors James Laxer and Melville Watkins.

The recommendation comes from the party's Provincial Executive and has the support of leader Stephen Lewis and most of the other 18 NDP members in the Legislature. The party hierarchy claims it also reflects the view of a majority of the rank and file, and it probably does.

But it is a fair guess the Council will not pass the recommendation. There may be a hundred and one reasons why it should but the problem of what to do about the Waffle is tearing the Ontario NDP apart. The result is that the forces of compromise are now desperately at work and some solution short of expulsion — which is what the recommendation to dissolve has come to mean — will almost certainly be found, however unrealistic it may be.

Demand of Reality

Certainly the political realities demand that the Wafflers, in the NDP's self-interest, be kicked out.

The Waffle has become a party within the Party, with its own spokesmen, structure, meetings, organizer, fund-raising and membership list. It issues policy statements under the NDP label which are far to the left of the official Party line. It has publicly attacked the Party leaders, and some of their stalwart supporters in the trade union movement, in harsh and rather scurrilous terms.

It has become a chronic embarrassment to the NDP politically. From supporting (or appearing to) Quebec separatism to advocating doctrinaire socialism as the answer to everything from poverty to Canadian independence, it contributes to a "false perception" of the NDP by the public, to use Stephen Lewis' understated term, which the voters remember at the polls.

No doubt too much can be made of this, but the Waffle was undoubtedly an important factor in the NDP's poor showing generally in last year's Ontario election, and there were at least two seats held by the Party in the previous Legislature which were lost because of the Waffle albatross.

The danger that this will be repeated in the upcoming federal election is one of the reasons for forcing the Waffle issue at this time. Three Wafflers — including Messrs. Laxer and Watkins — have been nominated to date as NDP candidates in Ontario ridings and once again the voters can hardly be blamed if they get a false perception of just where the NDP stands.

But the Wafflers are not likely to be kicked out, for a variety of reasons peculiar to the Ontario New Democratic Party.

One is that the great majority of NDPers are not convinced the Waffle is that serious a problem, simply because they have not been politically exposed to it in any meaningful way. Those who have to get elected or re-elected for the Party know what a cross the Waffle is to bear, but in most ridings across the province the prospect of electing an NDP candidate is simply an academic one; in such ridings, NDPers are not election-minded and they tend to regard the Waffle as an internal party problem rather than as an external, political problem.

STEPHEN LEWIS
. . . no solution

Thinking so, it is inevitable they weigh the Waffle not against election results but against the NDP's cherished ideals of a democratic party which welcomes dissent and radicalism. In this context, the invitation to purge the Party of a relatively small number of radicals, concentrated in a few pockets of strength, is not an attractive one. After all, the NDP is supposed to be a socialist party and the Wafflers merely want — or so it appears — it to be more socialist still.

Another reason is that the Party leadership has not committed itself to expelling the Wafflers. Indeed, it has carefully avoided such a confrontation.

When Mr. Lewis raised the Waffle question in March, he said he wanted to end the shadow-boxing and meet the issue head-on. The speech that followed was a catalogue of Waffle sins. But Mr. Lewis did not conclude by saying the Wafflers had to be excommunicated. He concluded by saying he had no solution to offer other than that the Provincial Executive take the matter in hand.

The Executive did so by appointing a committee to survey and report, which report proved to be strongly anti-Waffle and despairing of any compromise because of "unacceptable" demands by the Waffle upon the Party. Again, however, expulsion was not recommended; the committee merely said the Waffle must be dissolved and that thereafter any NDPer who participates in a group "organized on a continuing basis for the expressed purpose of securing fundamental changes in the strategies, structure, leadership, policies and principles of the Party" be subject to disciplinary action.

Expulsion Issue Escalated

Even this mild conclusion was not acceptable to the Waffle. Messrs. Laxer and Watkins, while making conciliatory noises in some respects, have declared unequivocally that the Waffle will not disband, thereby escalating the issue into one of expulsion.

Much agonizing is now going on over what the compromise language is to be, but it doesn't really matter. Short of expulsion, any compromise will be victory for the Waffle and both sides know it. Mr. Lewis and others have been rebuffed too often by the Waffle in various reconciliation attempts over the past year to think that anything short of expulsion will now resolve the problem.

What the Waffle wants is to take over the Ontario NDP and considering the short time it has been operating, it is proving itself remarkably adept at the task. Mr. Lewis knows this but he has two problems. One is that in the NDP such issues are decided by the Party, not by the leader. The other is that his leadership is probably not strong enough to win a them-or-me confrontation.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Smiling Prince

The Duke of Windsor, then Prince of Wales, was given a tumultuous welcome in Toronto when he toured Canada in 1919 at the age of twenty-four. Men who had fought in the 1914-18 war broke ranks in their enthusiasm and invaded the parade, lifted him from the white horse he was riding, and escorted him on their shoulders through the cheering crowds in the streets.

Later, at the top of the steps outside the City Hall, the Prince of Wales was about to sign the visitors' book when there was a voice from the crowd: "Better read it first. You may be signing the pledge!" He looked up and smiled and a press photographer caught the smile at just the right moment. A gay and friendly smile, the smile of a young Prince much in love with life. — Frank R. Hasse, 3690 Richmond Rd.

Pressure Groups

As a pensioner, I was most gratified to hear our premier condemn pressure groups, and his assurance that we would not be ruled by such groups.

The pressure groups, which the premier met during his recent safari through the province at the tax-payers expense, carried placards and behaved in a most disorderly manner. I condemn such action as it is self-defeating. However the premier conveniently forgot to mention the other pressure groups in our province such as the insurance companies, some utilities, land speculators, banks, department and supermarket chains, oil companies, mining groups, forestry companies, etc., etc., who do not use placards but are far more effective by threats.

These groups are not so crude but are in actual fact far more effective and in my view hurt the ordinary citizen far more than a few misguided and crude people carrying placards and behaving outside the law and in this way losing the sympathy of the public. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 318-1580 Poplar Ave.

Electoral Control

It is heartening to find there are a few people around like Miss Maggi Lynn (letter, June 9) who are questioning the whole party-adversary political system, but I am unimpressed with the two alternatives she suggests.

The first was that the elector signify on his ballot not only whom he wants to represent his constituency but also whom he wants to head his government. That would place the elected head in the impossible position of trying to govern according to the wishes of local representatives having a completely different political philosophy. If he ignored them, they would be even more inept backbenchers than those we have at present. It would also mean limiting possible candidates for leadership to those who have access to the millions of dollars required to conduct a nation-wide or a province-wide election campaign — a situation which has developed in the U.S.

Regarding her second proposal — the recall ballot — I don't know the situation in B.C., but I do know several provinces (and States) have had provision for this on their statute books, but for some reason or other the right has seldom, if ever, been exercised. Perhaps she has some magic way of (a) getting the electors sufficiently aroused to petition for recall and (b) persuading the taxpayers to pay the cost of the by-elections that would result. If so, she should let us in on the secret.

So, back to the drawing board, Miss Lynn, and the best of luck. I'm pulling for you! — Bill Stovel, Suite 12, 1270 Yates St.

From the Times of June 13, 1912:

DUBLIN — A campaign of window-smashing was opened today by the Irish suffragettes who tried to emulate the deeds of their English sisters by being in vigorous conflict with the authorities. After the women had made an attack on most of the public buildings several of them were arrested.

The women, before the police arrived, had shattered 42 windows in the customs house, the post office, the land commissioner's office and the police station and military barracks.

Heart Transplant Haste Points Up the Need For Medical Definition

It's a Question Of Life and Death

A HEART READY FOR TRANSPLANT . . . is 'brain death' legitimate?

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

Do our society's rules of life and death need amending?

A strange sort of trial completed this month in Richmond, Va., seems to indicate that the answer is yes.

The judge was a tall and youthful Virginia artistocrat, a scholar-athlete who led his class at law school.

The plaintiff was a crippled black shoemaker, accusing a group of Medical College of Virginia doctors of a "systematic and nefarious" scheme to kill his brother by cutting out his heart for a transplant.

The defendants were the doctors, typical American scientist-surgeons, aggressive, ambitious, yet men trained to respect life and exert huge effort to prolong it.

The defendants of record were these doctors, yet the real defendant was the definition of death held by western man for centuries.

By this belief, a man died only when his heart stopped. The heart was the centre of life and emotions in science and folklore for almost all of man's days.

Cursory Search

Richmond plaintiff William Tucker's story was an emotional tale of a brother, Bruce Tucker, 56, brought to Medical College of Virginia Hospital — one block from the courtroom — after a fall; of brain cells that quickly died, although Bruce was kept breathing by a machine; of what seems to have been a cursory search for next of kin, after which Bruce's heart was taken, to be given to a sick white recipient.

The seven-man jury — no women, no blacks, all middle-class citizens, mainly in their 40s and 50s — had no trouble deciding that Bruce had been indeed dead, and the doctors were innocent.

They could do so because Judge A. Christian Compton, after much soul-searching, gave them a precedent-making set of instructions which for the first time in any court included "brain death" rather than heart stoppage alone as a legitimate concept.

Yet his instructions also were ambiguous. Under them, the jury could have ignored the plain fact of brain death had it so desired.

The verdict was hailed by key defendant Dr. David Hume as bringing "the law in line with medical opinion."

But the reaction of several of U.S. medical-legal authorities is that the ancient common law badly needs clarifying in an age when doctors are increasingly using brain death as a reason to stop the machine — to "pull the plug" and end life by any definition.

What is needed, they said, is a statute like one passed in Kansas in 1970 and in Maryland this year.

This says, factually, that medically there may be either death by heart and respiratory failure, or death by loss of brain function. It leaves to current medical practice the symptoms by which these facts may be recognized — making death, in other words, a medical rather than legal concept, and recognizing that doctors' methods of recognizing death, or remaining glimmers of life, sharpen from year to year.

In recent years they have sharpened tremendously, and this is the cause of the present confusion.

For the first time, because of new machines, new fluids, new knowledge of physiology,

SHUMWAY
. . . one a month

it is possible to plug a literally dead man into a machine to keep him breathing and his blood coursing through his body.

This new period of life-in-death started with the modern wedding of science and medicine in the 1940s and 1950s, with better respirators, heart-and-lung machines, artificial kidneys, seemingly artificial everything.

All this began to pose . . . and still poses, for thousands of relatives and doctors . . . the question, "When is it time to let this patient die?"

But the question was brought home to the public and medicine by the transplant era.

That era started in the late 1940s with the first kidney transplants. Loss of kidney function means sure death. Kidney replacement is a kind of miracle that has given life to thousands.

But the kidney is not a very glamorous organ. It purifies the blood and puts out urine; it is not a seat of sentiment or emotions.

It was only with the first heart transplant by Dr. Christiaan Barnard on Dec. 3, 1967, that the subject — and all the questions — came alive to the average mind.

This historic event produced both awe and jokes. Buttons and bumper strips read: "Drive carefully. Dr. Barnard is waiting."

Hume is one of the world's kidney transplant leaders. Lower is a brilliant heart surgeon who had worked with Dr. Norman Shumway of Stanford in developing in dogs the basic techniques of heart transplantation.

The quick, aggressive Barnard visited Palo Alto and Richmond, had a look at the results in their dog labs and went back to South Africa to start operating on human beings.

The Richmond surgeons, like others, were naturally impatient, and naturally interested on the morning of May 25, 1968, when they learned that Bruce O. Tucker, the accident victim brought in the night before, was rapidly deteriorating.

They had a man, Joseph Klett, dying of heart disease. A new heart seemed to be his only chance.

A medical-neurological team, not the transplant surgeons, was caring for Tucker. By a rule rapidly being set in all medical centres, they would not yield him to the transplanters until they were positive he was dead.

In making this diagnosis, they — as doctors every place also were doing in appropriate cases — would ignore the classic legal definition of death in Black's Law Dictionary (Fourth Edition, 1951), unchanged for at least 50 years.

Artificial Lung

By this definition death is: "The cessation of life; the ceasing to exist . . . a total stoppage of the blood, and a cessation of the animal and vital functions consequent thereupon, such as respiration, pulsation, etc."

In this view, the heart was the vital pump that maintained the blood circulation, respiration and pulsation. Tucker's heart, as the morning of May 25 wore on, continued beating, and therefore, by the Black's definition, he was alive. But soon Tucker's heart was beating only by virtue of an artificial respiration machine. Fill the lungs, supply the heart with fresh oxygen and it will continue to beat, even though the brain cells — as happened to Tucker's sometime that morning — had expired.

Although the courts of the land were still using the Black's definition, the Richmond neurologists relied instead on four tests:

- Complete unawareness and unresponsiveness to external stimuli. In the words of a code to be written in August 1968 by an ad hoc committee of the Harvard Medical School, "Even the most intensively painful stimuli evoke no vocal or other response, not even a groan, withdrawal of a limb or quickening of respiration."
- Complete lack of any spontaneous muscular movements or breathing, the latter established by turning off the machine for a few minutes to see what happens.
- Lack of any elicitable reflexes. "The pupil," for example, "will be fixed and dilated and will not respond to a direct source of bright light."
- As a confirmation of all above, a completely flat EEG — an electroencephalogram or brain-wave tracing.

Kidneys Too

This was not done in the case of Bruce Tucker, and still is not always considered necessary by every doctor. Tucker was placed on the respirator at 11:30 a.m. At 11:45 a.m. the doctor in charge noted that "prognosis for recovery is nil and death is imminent."

Shortly after 1 p.m. a neurologist made an EEG — it was flat — and found no other evidence of any life or brain activity. At 2:45 p.m. Tucker was taken into an operating room for the removal of his heart, as well as two kidneys to go to other patients.

At 3:30 p.m. the respirator was shut off, and at 3:35 p.m. he was pronounced dead. This was some minutes after an incision had already been made in the chest of Joseph Klett.

Tucker was still breathing, however, with continued aid. As the anesthesiologist's record, read in the Richmond courtroom, dramatically stated:

"4:30 p.m., temperature, 92.5; pulse, 100; respiration, 20; blood pressure, 80.

". . . 4:32 p.m., heart out."

In those same afternoon hours, Bruce Tucker's shoemaker brother, William, was calling the hospital three times, to be variously told that Bruce was in the operating room, the recovery room, etcetera. A friend of Bruce's, inquiring at various hospital desks, was told he was not there.

No word to any of these inquirers about a heart transplant. And the operating doctors were informed that neither the hospital nor police could find any kin.

How could this happen?

"Go to any big hospital emergency room when it's busy and see how many people are trying to get information and all the confusion, and you'll understand," another medical college of Virginia doctor commented.

Still, this failure inevitably aroused black resentment in a town that was then more than 50 per cent black (after an annexation, the figure is now 42 per cent).

William Tucker's lawyer, L. Douglas Wilder, first black Virginia state senator since reconstruction, told the jury that Bruce Tucker was "one of the faceless masses of blacks" to the hospital hierarchy.

William Tucker went to the hospital at 7 p.m. on May 25, but not even then was he informed that his brother's heart was missing — transplanted. His resentment helped trigger the lawsuit.

And it forced the tall, thoughtful Judge Compton to grapple with the question, "What is death?"

At first Campton said he would give the jury the Black's definition, dignified by court rulings as late as 1968. After long, hard, almost frenzied argument by the defendants' attorney and a lecturer in legal medicine at MCV, Compton decided the jury could heed either the classic definition or the new one, and could also consider whether the classic signs — respiration, pulsation — were being maintained naturally or mechanically.

Not Given Option

In other words, he let the jury make up its own mind, but he did give it the newer option.

The jury's decision "is very welcome," but "I do think it would be wise to give it the dignity of law," commented Harvard's distinguished Dr. Henry Beecher, emeritus chief of anesthesiology, chairman of the 1968 Harvard ad hoc committee and a fierce guardian of the rights of patients in the hands of medical zealots.

Dr. William Curran, professor of legal medicine at Harvard and both a lawyer and an M.D., was even more emphatic.

"We can't have surgeons guessing," he said. "I think statutes are absolutely necessary to protect doctors and enable them to save lives."

While surgeons elsewhere mainly have been observing a moratorium on heart transplants, Shumway and colleagues at Stanford have been going ahead with about one a month. Now, reports Dr. Eugene Dong, Shumway's deputy, "if a patient survived the first three months — and 22 patients have — 75 per cent will survive to one year."

This approaches the survival rate for kidney transplants from corpses, today the main supply.

Mechanical hearts are a decade away, if indeed that soon, Dong argues. "Heart transplantation is available now, and the need for its wider and appropriate application is urgent."

Richmond's Dr. Lower agrees. There is still a Tucker lawsuit pending in federal court.

But "we've looked at maybe half a dozen prospective transplant patients in the past two years," he says. "I think there was a reluctance to get very seriously involved while this litigation was hanging over us. I think that now if we had a patient we really felt was a candidate, there's no question but that we'd try to get a donor."

Urgent Order

Would a future heart donor's family, easily available or not, be handled a little differently from Bruce Tucker's? "We made what we thought were rigorous attempts to locate Tucker's family," Lower insists. Kidney transplants are regularly made at MCV from unclaimed donors.

Still, four more heart transplants were performed there in 1968. None was from an unclaimed body, and "find the relatives" is today a more urgent order.

You Can Get Hooked on That Stuff

By GARY LAUTENS
The Toronto Star

Ottawa has a new concern — the growing number of Canadians who are reading about marijuana.

"Is it serious?" I asked an informant in our nation's capital.

"Serious? Just look at the statistics," he suggested. "Up until 1965, only 3.5 per cent of Canadians over 30 had ever read a magazine article, newspaper story or paperback text about marijuana.

"This year we estimated the total will be over 92 per cent."

"Are you suggesting reading about marijuana may be addicting?"

"That's the problem. We're not sure. Undoubtedly some people can read about marijuana, or leave it alone.

"But others may develop a psychological dependency. They just don't have the emotional make-up to handle marijuana literature.

"We're afraid they may go on to reading about speed, heroin and the other more dangerous drugs."

"I can understand your concern," was my reply. "Are there danger signals a marijuana reader can look for?"

"If a person finds himself with a compulsion to read at least one story about pot every day — he's in trouble. That's more than idle curiosity."

"Why do people read about marijuana?"

"The big thing is pressure from your peer group. When parents get together, they are expected to be up on all the latest marijuana surveys, arrests, reports, etc."

"How can you tell if a person has been doing a lot of marijuana reading?"

"By his or her eyes. They're usually red. That's because a lot of marijuana statistics are in small print."

"Other than making the eyes bloodshot, is marijuana reading injurious to the health?"

"Doctors are divided," my source replied. "Some claim it's no more harmful than reading about cigarettes, coffee or gin.

"Others, however, say it's too soon to make a judgment. Until we've had at least 15 or 20 years of testing, we won't really know the full impact of marijuana brochures on the human system.

"What can the government do in the meantime?" I demanded.

"Ottawa realizes it can't stop people from reading about marijuana — but it can discourage people from writing about it."

"You mean . . ."

"Yes, we're going to make it legal to possess literature about marijuana, but we intend to prosecute anyone caught writing, publishing or distributing stories about pot."

Study the Causes of Violence, Psychiatrists Warn Canada MDs

MONTREAL (CP) — More effort must be devoted to finding the causes of violence, identifying it before it erupts and coping with it once it has occurred, Canadian doctors were told Monday.

Four psychiatrists told the opening session of the Canadian Medical Association's annual meeting that "Canada is lucky," for the situation here "is not yet irreversible."

"We still have time in which to protect and enhance our quality of human life," Dr. Anthony M. Marcus of Vancouver said.

The University of British Columbia professor said a major cause of violence is the "powerlessness" that people feel—a sense that they cannot change the established order.

"If the capacity to truly change the existing order is felt to be zero . . . then a build up of frustration or apathy follows. There is a continuing erosion . . . (and) with no individual tyrant to fight against there is again withdrawal and apathy leading to powerlessness."

Dr. Lionel Solursh, a Toronto psychiatrist and University of Toronto professor, said the individual's frustration is a part of the cause of violence, but he also listed social causes. These included mass depression and frustration, economic considerations, availability of instruments of destruction, rapid change, mobility and lack of a stable geographic setting, insecurity on the part of parents and uncertainty about the future.

Dr. Marcus recommended a national advisory council be set up. It could keep abreast of current study and keep an eye on the causes of violence as they build up in the nation.

Such a council could act as an adviser to the federal, provincial and municipal governments in situations that threaten to erupt into violence, he said.

Dr. Solursh said there are four main way to "defuse" explosive situations, most of which could be used by the family doctor if he was aware of the problems building up.

For example, a doctor could help two individuals in an explosive situation see the reasons for their violent reactions. Or the doctor could act as a communications bridge between two persons.

Dr. Solursh said the doctor also could suggest other avenues of releasing tension.

Dr. Keith Yonge of Edmonton, a psychiatrist in the medical faculty at the University of Alberta, said such alternatives offer other means of crisis resolution.

"Why is it not possible for motorcycle gangs to use their internal violence, their tension, in parachute jumping instead of picking on the weak?"

Dr. Lionel Beliveau of Montreal, director of the Philippe Pinel Institute, described how his staff, who must deal with 300 criminally-violent prisoners, have learned to defuse violence.

"When staff started to trust patients, outbreaks of violence disappeared."

When those who deal with violent people stop seeing them as violent, there usually is change in their reaction, he said. Often the initial reaction encouraged further violence.

About 350 doctors registered for the first day of scientific lectures at the week-long convention. About 800 delegates are expected to attend.

A report on medical-legal problems with 16- and 17-year-olds who seek medical treatment without parental consent was presented by Dr. F. Norman Brown of Ottawa, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Medical Protective Association. He said that until provincial laws are changed doctors who treat minors without parental consent could be taken to court for assault.

So far no cases have been taken to court, but the medical association has asked the federal government to try to bring about a uniform lowered age of consent for medical treatment.

Pensioners Seek Boost to $150

Resolutions aimed at increasing the monthly guaranteed pension rate to $150 from $137.50 will be discussed at the annual B.C. Old Age Pensioners' Organization convention at Campbell River June 21 to 23.

Convention chairman Oliver Travers said today the pension resolutions are the most important of 70 that will be presented to 116 delegates.

The organization, established in 1932, now has 18,000 members and is primarily concerned with improving living conditions and providing social activities for pensioners.

Travers said the group wants the guaranteed income rate raised "for all whether they need it or not."

He said pensioners now have to "beg and apply" for a guaranteed rate and don't receive it if they have "a dollar or two extra income."

"It should be raised to $150 and everyone should receive that amount regardless of other income, because they have paid 2 per cent of their salaries into the pension for an average of 47 years.

"When we retire we have paid for this amount — we are only asking for what is due, not for a handout."

Other requests are to lower the pension eligibility age to 60 from 65 "especially for women" and to "try and get married couples on pensions simultaneously, regardless of whether one is under-age.

"When a man is over 65 and receiving his pension but his wife is ineligible, they just don't have enough to live on," he said.

Representatives will take their briefs to federal and provincial governments after a September annual meeting with national senior citizens organizations.

QUEBEC OUTLAWS FINE PRINT PACTS

QUEBEC (CP) — Buyers won't have to read the fine print on contracts after Aug. 1 — there won't be any.

Consumers protection that is unique will come into effect on that date, William Tetley, Quebec minister of financial institutions, said in a statement Monday.

The legislation, which forbids verbal contracts, specifies the size of printing on a contract, eliminating "cramped handwriting" or fine print.

It also outlaws all types of pyramid selling — sales which induce the buyer to pay for a portion of his purchase by selling the product to other consumers.

Also in effect Aug. 1 will be a plan to pay the costs of medicines required by welfare recipients, Claude Castonguay, social affairs minister, told a news conference.

He said the plan, expected to cost $15.4 million in the first year of operation will affect about 500,000 persons — the unemployed, invalids, handicapped persons, widows and their dependents.

$150,000 Failure

TORONTO (CP) — An experiment in reducing noise pollution along a section of Highway 401 last winter was a failure, Gordon Carton, Ontario minister for transportation and communications said Monday.

The walls erected to lessen noise from traffic had had a minimal effect and it was estimated each mile of wall would cost a prohibitive $150,000.

He said the best way to reduce traffic noise is to alter car design, a matter which is in the federal government's jurisdiction.

Noise pollution was raised during the Ontario government's estimates committee review of the transportation and communications ministry's budget.

Carton also said the possibility of insulating houses against noise is being investigated.

Liquid Highway Most Expensive

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

One of the biggest stumbling blocks to the establishment of major industries in Victoria is the freight rate between here and customers on the Mainland.

Provincial industrial development deputy minister L. C. Hempsall's view is that firms establishing in Victoria should write off the Vancouver market as a major source of income because freight rates make it virtually impossible to compete with Mainland firms.

The chamber points out that airlines give special rates for the Victoria-Vancouver portion of trips from Victoria to Calgary and other eastern points.

Passengers flying from Victoria to Calgary pay $78 return. They get the Victoria-Vancouver trip for $4 return.

Can freight companies do the same for long distance hauling?

No way! says Charles Ruttan, manager of Johnston Terminals Ltd., when you get involved with the liquid highway of Georgia Strait.

"The Victoria-Vancouver run is, per mile, just about the most expensive one in all Canada," Ruttan said. "We charge on a weight and time basis and we never know whether our trucks will have to wait for a late ferry."

He said local trucking firms do have a special rate for Victoria manufactured goods moving to Vancouver but it couldn't be at any bargain basement rate because of fixed ferry charges and delays at ferry terminals.

He has asked the provincial government to study the existing freight rate structure to see if some reductions can be made or whether government subsidies are warranted.

Hempsall said that the industrial development department has begun a study of the freight rate structure but has found it easier to identify the problems than to come up with solutions.

Hempsall said some reductions in cost could result from improved scheduling and he was hopeful that the CPR's new freight ferry would help solve some of the problems when it comes into service later this year.

He said the provincial government would help as much as it could but wanted to avoid pressuring any companies on behalf of other companies.

Teck Claims Its Offer Better

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court hearing to determine control of Afton Mines Ltd. was adjourned to Thursday, after another session of legal argument Monday. It is expected that the hearing will extend at least until Friday.

During the latest session, Mr. Justice Richard Anderson heard further argument from Jack Giles, lawyer for Teck Corp. Ltd., who alleged that Afton's directors had acted against the best interests of the company's shareholders by signing an agreement with Canadian Exploration Ltd. (Canex) without first seeking better terms elsewhere.

Giles said Canex had the right of first refusal for management of Afton's copper ore property near Kamloops — estimated to be worth upwards of $200 million — and he argued that Afton's directors first should have found out the terms other possible developers would have been prepared to offer.

Teck Corp. had said it would offer better terms than any other proposals, the lawyer claimed, and "the directors should have exploited the competition between Teck and Canex."

Giles said Teck had notified Afton, before its agreement with Canex was signed, that Teck had acquired a majority of the shares in Afton through purchases in the open market. He said that Teck had paid about $16 million for its purchases.

Teck's majority interest would be reduced to about 35 per cent if the Canex-Afton agreement is implemented, as the agreement provides for Canex to receive sufficient Afton shares to give it 30 per cent of the total then outstanding should Canex decide to place the property into production.

Giles argued that the Afton directors' action also was against the best interests of the firm's shareholders because the firm's articles prevent it from issuing shares for more than $4, when they have been trading in the market for prices between $10 and $15.

The Teck lawyer said he expects to complete his argument Thursday morning, and Canex lawyer John Bouck said he then would want to conduct cross-examination.

Wheat Board Decision Criticized

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Wheat Board has proposed taking over some major grain marketing functions from the about 20 firms that now do this job for a fee.

The companies, represented by the shippers and exporters committee of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, are unhappy about the wheat board proposals.

The companies feel the proposals, given to them last week, would end their role as principals in moving grain from the Lakehead down the St. Lawrence Seaway to export markets.

H. V. Hughes, of the grain merchandising division of James Richardson and Sons Ltd., said "we estimate the proposals will reduce our revenue from grain-handling by about one-third."

Hughes, who is also chairman of the shipper and exporters committee, said the proposals are "impossible" for the shippers and urged the board to reconsider.

The proposals generally follow recommendations of the grain marketing review committee, which had a report on grain selling tabled in the Commons more than a year ago.

Exchange Looks At Gold

WINNIPEG (CP) — The chairman of the Winnipeg of a prohibition on selling gold futures market may be established soon at the exchange, now that federal regulations on trading gold have been eased.

R. G. Purves said exchange directors have been looking at a gold futures market for some time. The prospects improved with the recent repeal of a prohibition on selling gold for future delivery.

He said that with the rule change by federal and Bank of Canada officials, "we believe it would be possible now for us to go ahead with the gold market."

No introduction date has been established and the idea still needs formal approval of directors of the exchange.

Purves, who is also president of Inter-Ocean Grain Co. Ltd., said the first question is to draw up trading regulations and "developing a suitable trading mechanism."

He said if all goes well, a gold futures market could be established "within the next few months."

Canada Cement

Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. has purchased control of the Gallelli group of companies. Previously a minority shareholder, Canada Cement acquired the balance of outstanding shares in the Calgary group effective June 8.

The companies are Gallelli Holding Ltd., Gallelli and Sons Co. Ltd. and Gallelli Construction Materials Ltd.

Seagrams

Distillers Corp.-Seagrams Ltd. reports net income of $44,453,000 (U.S.) in the nine months ended April 30, compared with $40,857,000 in the first three-quarters of the previous year.

The figures do not include extraordinary items of $577,000 in the last nine months. The items consist of a gain on sale of a Canadian subsidiary, practically offset by a loss arising from foreign currency transactions resulting from parity changes of the U.S. dollar.

Net income per share, adjusted for a two-for-one stock split Nov. 26, 1971, rose to $1.26 from $1.16 in the corresponding 1971 period. The extraordinary items provided an additional per share income of two cents in the 1972 period.

Sales for the nine months ended last April 30 rose to $1,224,128,000 from $1,168,683,000 in the first three-quarters of last year.

Cons. Building

Consolidated Building Corporation Limited reports revenue for the year ending Feb. 29 1972, increased 18.2 per cent to $17,560,484 from $14,820,590.

Earnings for the year before deferred income taxes were $1,039,180, an increase of 25 per cent over the $832,060 of the previous year. Net earnings after providing for deferred income taxes of $520,000 increased 11 per cent to $519,180 over the $457,060 of the previous year.

Cash flow from operations increased 30 per cent to $1,231,450 as compared to $943,157 and the company's bank loan was reduced by $1,231,000. Cash flow per common share increased to 25 cents from 19.5 cents.

Assets increased to $26,791,317 from $24,471,267. The company also controls an additional $11,357,461 in assets through its investment in joint ventures.

'Defies' Explanation

LONDON (CP) — Many decisions by business are being held up because parts of Canada's new Income Tax Act "still seem to be defying interpretation," J. H. Moore of Toronto, said Monday.

Moore, president of Brascan Ltd., told the annual conference of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario that chartered accountants and lawyers had an obligation to point out major problems in the new income tax legislation when it was being drawn up.

However, he said, accountants and lawyers had "failed in the crunch" over the recent tax reform.

W. A. Macdonald, a Toronto lawyer and an authority on taxation, agreed.

"We ran out of steam and threw in the towel," said Macdonald, a governor of the Canadian Tax Foundation.

Both the chartered accountants and the legal profession must "seek with more than usual care, to understand and to spread understanding of the tax law we now have," he said.

Both groups must learn from the tax reform experience and take "a firmer role in the new tax policy developments on the horizon than we did during the tax reform just passed."

TRUSTEES DROP PLANS FOR BCSTA PULLOUT

Greater Victoria's school trustees did a lot of forgiving Monday night — especially trustee Peter Bunn — by agreeing to remain members of the B.C. School Trustees Association.

The move follows a year of bitter disagreements with the BCSTA over its administration and its method of running annual conventions.

Although the issue did not come to an actual vote at the finance and legal affairs committee meeting, the trustees indicated by their arguments that they will vote to stay in the BCSTA when the matter comes up again at next Monday's regular board meeting.

Bunn, the foremost critic of the BCSTA in the past, led off debate Monday night and surprised trustees and observers with a plea for trustees to support staying in the BCSTA, even though he said there may not be many benefits obvious from present membership.

OTHERS FOLLOW

Four other trustees — Philip Ney, Carron Jameson, Hal Knight and Daphne Temple — followed Bunn's lead and supported staying in, while board chairman Allan McKinnon, Walter Donald, and Harry Graham expressed opposition. Trustee Lavinia Greenwood did not indicate a definite opinion.

This virtually assures the necessary majority at the regular board meeting.

Much discussion was made of the BCSTA convention held in Vancouver in May. The Victoria board had voted in January to pay only half a year's fees in order that a decision could be made on membership following the convention.

URGES WITHDRAWAL

McKinnon, in urging withdrawal, said the convention was an illustration of most of the things he finds wrong with the BCSTA.

He said most of the "meaningful" resolutions submitted for consideration by the convention were either ignored or "side-tracked by chicanery" or voted on by trustees who cannot be considered enlightened.

McKinnon also criticized the interminable discussions of certain matters at the convention by honorary life members "who do not represent anybody except the viewpoint of the BCSTA establishment," and the minimal effect the BCSTA has in shaping or influencing the policies of the department of education.

Donald said if the board does not pull out this year, it may have to give a year's notice of intent to pull out after this year, since the BCSTA executive is planning to change the body's bylaws.

"Any organization that has to formulate its own rules to keep people from leaving indicates there must be a hole in the boat somewhere," he said.

Two other school districts which have dropped out of the BCSTA recently are Surrey and Burnaby. They are among the five largest school districts in the province. Vancouver is largest and Greater Victoria is second largest.

Trustees who favored staying in the organization said withdrawal could hurt the BCSTA and its members, especially smaller school boards.

"Rather than abandon the BCSTA, we should give it whatever strength we can," said Jameson.

He said withdrawal would weaken the position of each trustee in the province.

Indian Yarn Splits School Board

What started out as an exercise in "book burning" resulted in a split of opinion on the Greater Victoria school board Monday night over the merits of a story in a Grade 5 reader about an Indian who broke the law and was hunted and killed by the mounted police.

The story, contained in a book called Under Canadian Skies, is about a young Indian named Almighty Voice who lived in Saskatchewan in 1895.

The story says Almighty Voice one day stole a cow and took it back to his tribe, who ate it with him.

The police caught Almighty Voice and put him in jail for a month, but he escaped and hid. When the police came looking for him he shot one of them dead and ran off again.

Two years later, Almighty Voice was cornered by more policemen and a shoot-out occurred, leaving six more men dead, including Almighty Voice and two Indian friends.

Trustee Walter Donald brought the story up at the board's education committee meeting, and urged that the minister of education withdraw the book from the prescribed reading course.

Donald said he objected to the attitude the story showed and the violence it justified in the capture of Almighty Voice.

Donald was supported by trustees Philip Ney and Lavinia Greenwood but got a stiff argument from Carron Jameson and board chairman Allan McKinnon.

Jameson said he hesitated to engage in "book burning," adding that the story does not necessarily imply that all Indians are law-breakers and killers.

He referred to the objections rasied by Jewish communities around the world at Dickens' Oliver Twist because the villain Fagin was called a Jew. Similarly, he said, Italian-Americans in New York had objected to being referred to as members of the Mafia in the book and movie The Godfather.

"A degree of maturity is necessary from these groups to be able to accept criticism," he said. "My only objection is that the book is poorly written."

McKinnon said the violence contained in the episode is not worse than what is shown on television where "real men are shot dead on national networks."

McKinnon also said the story should cause no great alarm to children who read it.

"If we are going to start going through our readers a la 1984 looking for real or imagined slights against races, we won't have time for our other duties," he said.

Ney objected to the story's use, saying it promotes the unhealthy caricature of the "heap-big-Indian," the creation of the white man.

PROTECTION AGAINST SHARP, CUTTING ROAD HAZARDS.

THIS IS THE MAIN REASON OUR COMPETITION GIVES YOU TO BUY THEIR STEEL-BELTED TIRE.

At $55 a tire and up, Uniroyal thinks you should have more reasons.

Uniroyal wasn't the first to introduce steel-belted tires in Canada. Or even the second. We held off because something was bothering us. Especially our engineers.

And that was, "how do you make a steel-belted tire that'll do everything it should, without giving a harsh, stiff ride?"

The answer, months and months later, is the Uniroyal Intersteel. And it was worth waiting for. Because it's considerably different than everybody else's steel-belted tire, and as a result, we believe considerably better.

Our construction vs. theirs.

In one respect, all steel-belted tires are the same. They all have steel belts (in mesh form) running around the circumference of the tire.

Among other things, these steel belts provide superb "hazard protection".

That is, they make it very difficult for nails, broken bottles and general highway debris to penetrate through the steel and puncture the tire.

And that's obviously, all to the good.

What isn't so good or obvious, is that steel, being the stiff material it is, can cause a tire to ride somewhat harshly and noisily (especially at speeds under 45 m.p.h.)

Even more so, we believe, when the steel belts are applied directly against the tread.

We "sandwiched" our steel belts between two layers of polyester.

Tread. Polyester. Steel. Polyester.

Comfort.

You don't have to be an engineer to see that you're bound to get a more comfortable ride with a tire built like the Intersteel.

The Uniroyal Intersteel. The reason you've never seen a tire like it before is because there wasn't one.

And in the long run, that's a very important plus. Simply because, it's something else you don't have to worry about.

As promised, however, there are even more reasons for investing in Intersteels.

Performance.

The next plus is increased performance.

Belts on a tire help prevent a tire from distorting when it's moving. In short, they help keep more rubber on the road and allow the tread to fully perform the way it was designed to.

Steel belts do a better job of this than any other material. And in our opinion, Intersteel does the best job of all, thanks to the way it's built.

Our polyester layers top and bottom bond our steel belts in place with exceptional firmness. Which in turn, helps to hold down the tread even more. The result: Greater steering control. Greater skid control. Better traction.

Mileage.

And last but not least, all of this results in increased mileage.

Because the less a tire squirms when it's moving (and our steel belts plus the precise construction of our polyester plies see to that), the cooler it runs. And the cooler it runs the longer its chances of lasting longer. Less squirm also means less rubber is likely to scrub off on the road. Which again increases mileage.

We set out to give you more reasons for buying our steel-belted tire than anybody else. And we think we've done it.

But what's really important, is that we couldn't have, if some stubborn engineers hadn't set out to build a better tire than anybody else. And done it.

IWA Still Holds Hope; Strike Notice Served

Hopes for a negotiated settlement without a strike in the coast timber dispute continued to be held out today by regional president Jack Moore of the International Woodworkers of America.

He made the comment after the union served 72 hours strike notice on 115 companies represented by Forest Industrial Relations.

Negotiations between the IWA and FIR continued today, with the current contract expiring at midnight Wednesday.

"What we want is an agreement, but we don't want to just drift into a strike, if it comes to that," he said. "Strike notice is a formality but we pretty well had to serve it."

One union source said the serving of the 72 hours strike notice, a requirement of the Mediation Commission Act, would protect the IWA from an action for damages in the event of unofficial walkouts after the contract expires.

The source said that progress is being made in the negotiations and "it looks fairly hopeful."

The coast IWA contract covers 28,000 workers in mills and in logging.

The union initially sought a wage increase of $1 an hour in a one-year contract, plus wage adjustments and fringe benefit improvements. FIR has offered an increase of 71½ cents an hour in a three-year contract. Current base rate is $3.72.

INTERIOR VOTES

In the southern interior, IWA members have voted 93.7 per cent in favor of strike action to back wage demands.

Sonny Alexander, president of the Kamloops IWA local, said a settlement may be forthcoming within three or four days.

"There are two weeks left to negotiate and there's a lot of ground to cover but the 93.7 per cent vote should hurry along negotiations," he said.

The union is seeking an increase of $1.14 an hour this year plus fringe benefits. Interior Forest Labor Relations Associations, which bargains for the companies, has offered 15 cents an hour this year and 15 cents next year.

Rites Set

Funeral services will be held in Kingston, Ontario, Friday for Brig.-Gen. James Crossley Stewart, who died in Vancouver Sunday at the age of 81.

Stewart, who retired from the Canadian Army in 1947, served in both world wars and was district commanding officer in Victoria in 1939.

Stewart received the Distinguished Service Order medal after the First World War. He commanded the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery until 1936 when he was promoted to brigadier and went to London, Ont., to serve as district commanding officer.

After the Second World War he served in command at Halifax.

'Quiet' Policeman Dies

Funeral services will be held Wednesday in Burrard Funeral Chapel, North Vancouver, for veteran policeman Randle Charles Barrington-Foote, who died here Saturday at the age of 81.

Barrington-Foote, who worked with B.C. police for 37 years, was popularly known by his colleagues as the "quiet policeman" whose authority came from respect, not size.

He came to Canada from England in 1913 at the age of 17, worked on Prairie ranches, B.C. farms and ran a store at Parksville before joining the old B.C. Police in 1924.

During the First World War he served with the British army as a Royal Artillery captain and during the second, served as a Canadian army provost marshal in the Prince George-Prince Rupert area.

Barrington-Foote returned to the B.C. Police as corporal until 1950 when he joined the RCMP, which had taken over provincial police duties.

From 1952 to 1961 he worked with the West Vancouver police.

He is survived by his wife, Irene, at home, 110 Douglas; sons Mervyn, Squamish, B.C., and Alan, Burnaby, B.C.; daughters Shelagh Leathwood, Kaslo, B.C., Olive Buss, Victoria, B.C., Brenda Stinson, San Diego, California and Nancy Wichware, Yellowknife, N.W.T.; 22 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Jose Pays With His Life For His Latest Escapade

Jose paid for his crimes with his life Monday.

Colwood RCMP said Jose's owner, Wes Chowen, did away with the monkey by hitting him over the head with a hammer after Ann Burchill, 14, was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital with injuries to her right hand.

"He clobbered it with a hammer," RCMP said.

The girl was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital Monday night.

It all began when Mrs. Grace Burchill, Ann's mother, drove by the kennel at about 3:30 p.m. and spotted the monkey.

Jose jumped on the car, shook the radio antenna, and attempted unsuccessfully to get inside the car. Since the school bus was due at any moment Mrs. Burchill went home and called the Colwood RCMP to remove the monkey.

But back at Atkins Ave. the school bus had arrived and Jose, not satisfied with his escape, attacked Ann Burchill and Cheryl Williams, 15, biting her on the leg.

The girls took refuge in the owner's house. When the monkey's owner returned, justice caught up with Jose.

Monday's escapade was not Jose's first brush with crime. Last November he kidnapped a six-week-old puppy and unwittingly sparked a row between his owner and the SPCA.

That time, he grabbed the pup from under the nose of its mother and hid it on a fence eight-feet above the ground.

The dog was found some time later with cuts and a broken leg.

The SPCA seized the pup to send it to a vet and the kennel threatened legal action against the animal protection agency. The pup later was destroyed.

Recitals Set June 14, 21

Four Victoria musicians will take part in recitals June 14 and 21 at St. John's Anglican Church.

Frances Carter, music director of the Church of Our Lord will play organ works of Bach, Franck and Hindemith at the first recital. Baritone Charles Dorrington will sing works of Dvorak, Mendelssohn and Handel.

Performing at the June 21 recital will be Kathryn Ely, harpist, and John Gakkienne, organist.

Both performances begin at 8 p.m.

School End Near

Fifty-eight years of education will come to an end this month when Beacon Hill school closes for the last time.

The school has been ordered closed by the Greater Victoria school board in the interests of economy. The 50-plus students who have been attending the school will be accommodated at South Park Elementary.

To mark the occasion, an informal reunion will be held June 27 at 7:30 p.m. for all former students, teachers and parents at the school.

Water Debate Heats Up

A petition from Ardwell subdivision residents complaining of costly and inadequate water supply was rejected Monday by Sidney council.

The petition asked for the resignation of Bob Gibbs, secretary-treasurer of the Sidney Waterworks District.

Mayor Stan Dear said. "The man they want is not Gibbs; he does what he has been told to do by the water board."

He said the council should not consider the petition because water supply is not within the jurisdiction of the municipal council.

"The waterworks board can and will provide answers at this meeting this Wednesday," Dear said.

IMPROVE?

Council tried to ignore a question put repeatedly by George Allen of 2034 Ardwell, organizer of the petition, from the gallery. "Will the water situation in Sidney improve or will it get worse?" Allen asked.

Dear told Allen, "you are being very difficult. This is not a matter for interpretation by council."

Allen continued to speak from the gallery. He said. "From June 1 to June 7, the dear ladies of this town could not flush their toilets."

Following receipt of a letter from J. P. Killer, 2157 Bradford, Dear noted permits for water connections are obtained separately from building permits and the water board is withholding water connection permits for a number of projects. "This town has no jurisdiction over the water supply," he said.

Ald. Fred Robinson said construction had far outpaced the adequacy of available water in the summer months and Ald. Chris Anderson said action should have been taken 10 years ago.

"It is not too late", said Robinson.

Ald. Hugh Hollingworth said only three taxpayers had attended the annual meeting at which trustees are elected to the city waterworks board. Perhaps, suggested the alderman, the meeting should have been called now when restriction are in effect instead of in the early spring.

Public Meeting Set On Sanscha Future

A public meeting and vote will be held June 20 at Sanscha Hall on a proposal to have the building placed under the trusteeship of the town of Sidney.

Mayor Hugh Curtis will chair the meeting at which registered voters living north of Central Saanich will be entitled to vote.

Ald. Wilkie Gardner said Monday that Sidney council as trustee for the Sanshca buildings and grounds would be permitted to sublease property. The Vancouver Island regional library would continue to operate there on the same basis as before.

Meanwhile, council formally approved prepration on a money referdum which would permit construction of a 25-meter swimming pool on Sanscha grounds. The referendum would be put to ratepayers this summer.

Parking Dispute Over

A two-year dispute between Oak Bay council and Florence Street residents over parking facilities was settled Monday night.

Members of council's streets and traffic committee agreed to post "residents only" signs from the lane on Florence to Cadboro Bay 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The residents had complained that employees from the nearby Saunders and Hitchman Sales and Service Ltd. had blocked access to their properties by parking their cars on the street.

In other business the committee agreed to have an oak tree cut down at the corner of Woodburn and Wessex because it was potentially dangerous to passers-by.

Chips Down in Vegas Probe

LAS VEGAS — Dozens of casino employees were under investigation Monday after authorities uncovered what they said was an organized ring of gamblers who bilked casinos out of at least $300,000 through the use of "hollow chips."

Authorities speculate that several casino employees may have been terrorized into co-operating with the ring by beatings and murders.

Phil Hannifin, chairman of the Nevada gaming control board, said between 25 and 30 persons apparently were involved in the operation and at least six casinos were victimized in the past month. He estimated the total loss at between $300,000 and $400,000.

Investigators said the ring apparently siphoned off the money through the use of a hollowed-out cup, an aluminum tube attached to a genuine $5 chip making it look like a stack of three.

A co-operating dealer would slip $100 chips into the cup when paying off a ring member in what would appear to security personnel and other players to be a take of $15.

NEW YORK — Messages and memoranda sent by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in the spring of 1945 challege a view held by some that he was practically feeble during the Big Three meetings at Yalta in February of that year, the New York Times reports.

The documents, sent to Prime Minister Winston Churchill until April 11, the day before Roosevelt died, bear the president's signature and handwritten corrections.

Churchill had written that although he did not have exact information about Roosevelt's health, "I had the feeling that, except for occasional flashes of courage and insight, the telegrams he was sending us were not his own."

BALTIMORE — A federal judge Monday ordered an immediate psychiatric examination of Arthur Bremer, accused in the shooting of Alabama Gov. George Wallace, as the government prosecutor pressed for a speedy trial.

Judge Edward Northrop granted the government request that he order the examination after George Beall, U.S. Attorney for Maryland, said there is a "substantial basis to conclude that there will be a defence of insanity in this case."

GELNHAUSEN — A 19-year-old U.S. Army sergeant, spurned by a West German waitress, reinforced his bid for her affections with a tank.

Police said that after the fraulein turned down his request for a date, the sergeant returned to Coleman Barracks in this central German town and commandeered a tank at the motor pool.

When he reached the bar where the girl worked, the soldier lowered the tank's gun and pointed it at the entrance. The sergeant was hauled out of the tank and turned over to military police.

TAVARES, Fla — Lake County Sheriff Willis McCall was arrested Monday for second degree murder in the fatal beating of a black man arrested for driving with an out-of-date auto inspection sticker.

The 62-year-old law enforcement officer was charged in the death of Tommy Vickers, 37, who died April 23 as a result of a blow to the stomach.

TEL AVIV — Israeli authorities are reported preparing a show trial for Kozo Okamoto, the surviving member of the Japanese trio who staged the massacre at Tel Aviv's Lod Airport two weeks ago.

Saul Alinsky Organized Poor

CARMEL, Calif (WP) — Saul Alinsky, who spent a lifetime organizing the powerless to achieve power through the radical concept of what he called "pure democracy," died Monday at his home here following an apparent heart attack. He was 61.

Alinsky's career was a succession of generalships over mass movements of the oppressed in America.

It began with battles on behalf of dissident mine workers and continued in his native Chicago where he organized white slum dwellers in the Back-of-the-Yards section.

He later organized blacks in the ghettos of a dozen cities, including Chicago, Rochester, N.Y., Kansas City, and Buffalo.

In the end, he sought redress for an increasingly alienated and powerless American middle class, while also trying to teach his organizing methods to others.

If his assaults and threats goaded the conservative establishment to rage, he also preserved a distance from liberals "who walk out of the room when an argument becomes a fight," and drew fire from radicals who found him ideologically impure.

Alinsky began developing his reflexes in Chicago, where he was born the son of a Jewish tailor who had emigrated from Russia.

Growing up, Alinsky experienced many of the same frustrations that later embittered the city's blacks.

He attended the University of Chicago and, as a graduate student in criminology, studied the organization of the Capone gang and also began his own organizing efforts. He brought about better economic conditions for impoverished white immigrants by putting pressure on their employers—the meat packing companies—through boycotts and sitdowns.

Since 1967, Alinsky had devoted himself mainly to teaching in the institute he founded in Chicago, and in keeping in touch with such proteges as Cesar Chavez, the organizer of the California farm workers, and journalist Nicholas von Hoffman.

"I have had a ball doing what I am doing," he said in 1967, "but now I figure I have 10 productive years left. Maybe I should start training others."

ANYTHING FOR A LARK . . .

WASHINGTON — The wife of a McLean, Va., man who collects Studebakers had 16 of his 28 cars towed away Monday to avoid being arrested for violating a zoning ordinance.

Robert Reynolds, a housing contractor, was working in Anne Arundel county when two trucks hauled up to his corral of mostly rusted and inoperable cars and hauled away the bits of treasure Reynolds started collecting 10 years ago.

In a four-year battle with zoning authorities, Reynolds has fought to save his badly weathered collection of nearly every Studebaker model from 1927 to 1964.

Officials maintain that by collecting, storing and dismantling inoperable cars in a residential community, Reynolds has illegally been operating a junkyard.

Reynolds, 42, maintains that his cars — which were kept behind a stockade fence — are not junk but a "priceless collection" which should be preserved for all times.

Gentle Period Piece Opens Shaw Festival

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont. (CP) — The Shaw Festivals 11th season opened Monday night with a slow-moving and gentle-humored American comedy from the 1930s that proved to be a general audience pleaser.

It was a break from tradition for the festival to open with The Royal Family, a fond look at an American theatrical family strongly resembling the famous Barrymores, written in 1927 by George Kaufman and Edna Ferber.

It was the first time a non-Shavian play opened the world's only festival devoted to the works of Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw and his contemporaries, and also the first time the festival ever had staged an American play.

While first-night jitters were obvious in muffed lines and the production's pace frequently dragged, there were many amusing moments and some very moving ones.

Performances by Ruth Nelson as Fanny Cavendish, Charmoion King as Julia Cavendish, Jim McQueen as Tony Cavendish, Sheppard Strudwick as Herbert Dean, Susan Hogan as Gwen and especially Jonah Royston as Gilbert Marshall made the fragility of the play and the faults of the production seem slight in significance.

The production, directed by Canadian actor-director Donald Davis, has a four-week run, and will be followed by two Shaw plays, performed in repertory throughout the remainder of the 12-week season.

Both Getting Married, opening July 16, and Misalliance, which opens July 19 after a seven-week tour of central Canada and eastern United States, are directed by Paxton Whitehead, the festival's artistic director.

This is the last season productions are being presented in the small Court House Theatre. Next year will see the opening of a new 800-seat theatre, now under construction in this scenic community 40 miles north of Niagara Falls.

As first-nighters, decked out in formal and faddish fashions, entered the court house theatre Monday night they were invited to contribute $1 each toward putting a roof on the new building, which is being built at a total cost of $3 million.

A's Bats Turn Vida Blue

By The Associated Press

Vida Blue's fastball is alive and humming in Oakland. Too bad the same can't be said of the Athletics' bats whenever he pitches.

"I hope one of these games I pitch, the Athletics get some hits and runs," said Blue after losing a heart-breaking 1-0 game to Pat Dobson and Baltimore Orioles Monday night.

Considering recent developments, Blue has every right to feel that way.

Winner of the Cy Young Award and Most Valuable Player in the American League last year, Blue came back late this year after contract difficulties and hasn't had much support since.

In 25 innings, the left-hander has been backed by a grand total of one run and hasn't won a game in three decisions because of it.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit Tigers defeated Minnesota Twins 2-1 and Texas Rangers swamped Milwaukee Brewers 7-1.

Blue's best performance of the year was witnessed by the largest crowd to watch the Athletics since they moved west from Kansas City in 1968. The enormous crowd also saw Pat Dobson pitch one of the best games of his career, a powerhouse three-hitter.

"I threw the best curve ball I've had since coming to Baltimore," said Dobson. "And I was throwing it for strikes, too."

Don Buford collected one of only five hits off Blue in his eight innings of work, but it was a big one—a single in the eighth that knocked in the game's only run.

"Blue is throwing as well as he ever did last year," said Buford. "He threw a lot of pitches early in the game, more breaking pitches than fast balls."

Norm Cash and Mickey Stanley cracked home runs while Joe Niekro and Fred Scherman pitched out of constant trouble in Detroit's victory.

Mike Paul and Casey Cox teamed for a three-hitter and Don Mincher hit a home run and double, driving in four runs, as Texas defeated Milwaukee.

Paul, making only his second start of the season, allowed but two hits in seven innings. After the starter tired, Cox came on to pitch the final two innings and gave up only George Scott's ninth inning single.

HE'S TELLING, not begging, while Montreal Expos protest close call at first base. Umpire Douglas Harvey explains to Montreal players John Boccabella (12) and second-baseman Ron Hunt why he called Houston runner safe. Expos dropped 3-1 National League decision to Astros at Houston.

Fishing: Frenchman International Champ

There are several ways to fish. One is with a small boy. Your boy. Another, highly recommended, is with a guide, or an acknowledged expert in his own right.

Small boys arrive on the scene, and quickly grow into bigger boys, long before their time, it seems. And if you can never adequately answer those seemingly endless questions: how deep is the water? Where do the woods go?, at least don't let the opportunity slip by without giving it a try.

Even if a boy does find out that father's powers aren't unlimited after all, and don't always include producing a fish, that type of a vacation ends, all too soon.

Now take the experts. For some their survival is assured only on the condition that they produce fish. This wasn't actually the case last week, but it was close enough.

A visit to Vancouver coincided with a world-wide press preview of the B.C. Salmon Derby, and it was generally assumed that fish would be caught, if at all possible.

For nearly all, it was the sole object of the trip.

Alas, such was not to be.

The first day produced a complete blank despite the loyal efforts on our behalf of former hockey star Larry Reardon and his able skipper-for-the-day, Cy Andrews of Sportsman's patrol.

Larry revealed all his personal secrets; and if no salmon showed, at least Boat Four claimed top honors. Siegfried Ihle of Cologne, Germany; Ed Neal of San Francisco, and Ron Keith of CP-Air, produced four nice lings while rejecting some smaller rockfish.

Meet the Experts: Cramond, Buck

The next day, the overall effort was stepped up. Things were serious. No fish wasn't a good recommendation for any derby. And so Mike Cramond was invited in. Mike is the outdoor writer for the Province, and he was eager to display his skill, impart his knowledge to the visitors, and search out the missing salmon. After all, he writes excellent books on fishing, has another coming out soon, and is a firm believer in practical demonstrations.

Our skipper was no ordinary captain either. Johnny Buck once caught a 54-pound spring, flies his own plane, and runs a fishing camp at Ribers Inlet. His 35-foot Chris Craft took the heavy slop well.

The new batting order included Bernie Van den Brande, whose brother has a Paris publication which deals in the outdoors; Cal Miller of Toronto, Rick Taylor of the Columbian, and yours truly. The other three boats could look after themselves and their prestigious guests.

Cramond was soon at work. Worlcombe Island was often a good spot, he said, but an hour of motor mooching in a choppy sea failed to produce. At best there was one hit. We moved on.

Gospel Rock is well named. "Jesus Saves" is painted there for all to see, and we anchored in about 90 feet of water. Mooching was the order. That's mostly the way it is, in and about Howe Sound, with live herring.

When Being Blanked Can Be a Bonus

And Bernie, our handsome Parisienne friend was the most eager of the lot to learn. Matter of fact we had been delayed earlier because Bernie needed film to record his possible catch. He had been fishing before, mostly for big brown trout in Europe and Atlantic Salmon off Ireland. He knew the rules. A picture would tell the story best. He would fill in the details.

While chatting, there was the tell-tale flick of his rod. Everyone noticed it. Bernie recognized it. Even from our poor French he understood what to look for. He reeled quickly, set the hook, and almost unfortunately the fish came easily up to the stern of the boat. Bernie was reluctant to lose this advantage and it took the persuasion of four people, all yelling at once, to get his attention and his hand off the reel.

After that, he was fine, and finally landed a bright, 9½ pound spring. It was the top fish of the tourney. The six pounder which followed was this Islander's contribution to the top boat.

As it was, Miller just missed giving us a sweep when later his reel sung out on a drift mooch. Too late! The salmon had gone, leaving its slash mark across the herring.

The next morning so had most of the visitors, except for Ihle, the German, and two Japanese. They weren't about to be upstaged by a Frenchman.

They were off to Rivers Inlet, for three days, and hopefully a boatful.

Dear 'Old Mets' Are Back Again

TOMMY AGEE
. . . forgot to make catch

By The Associated Press

Once upon a time, there was a very bad baseball team called New York Mets. This particular baseball team had a very difficult time with the national pastime.

After many years of very bad baseball, this team started to change. Soon, it became respectable and even won a world championship.

But every so often New York visits that hilarious past.

The Mets got nostalgic in the eighth inning of Monday night's game at Atlanta and in a spectacular recreation of their early, zany years, they delivered an 8-7 victory to the Braves.

Elsewhere on Monday's abbreviated schedule in the National League, Houston Astros downed Montreal Expos 3-1 St. Louis Cardinals edged Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

New York used home runs by John Milner, Wayne Garrett, Rusty Staub and Ken Boswell to build a 7-4 lead as the Braves came to bat in the eighth. With Tug McGraw working in relief of Gary Gentry, Atlanta bunched three singles by Ralph Garr, Rico Carty and Hank Aaron for one run.

Then it hit.

FORGOT TO CATCH

Darrell Evans attempted to sacrifice Aaron and pinch runner Sonny Jackson along. He bunted towards first base and Cleon Jones threw to Garrett at third, trying for the force. The play looked good except for one thing. Garrett forgot to catch the ball.

Aaron and Jackson both scored, tying the game, and Evans wound up on third base. Next, rookie Dusty Baker lofted a fly ball to centre and Tommie Agee angled over for it as Evans tagged up, getting ready to try and score. It looked as though it would be a close play at the plate except for one thing. Agee forgot to catch the ball.

The official scorer gave Baker credit for a sacrifice fly but the sting of the defeat didn't end there. Third base ump Nick Colosi made it a little worse by telling Mets' coach Eddie Yost that Evans had left the base too soon. That means if Agee had caught the ball and the Mets appealed at third base, Colosi would have called the runner out.

That's called the final turn of the knife and is a classic example of how the oldtime Mets used to lose.

The loss tumbled New York out of first place in the National League East and that was the only difference between the current and past Mets. The old club never had a chance to fall out of first place because they never got there in the first place.

If Work Helps, Arnie's Ready

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif., (AP) — It's the 19th U.S. Open coming up for Arnold Palmer and, if Arnie's Army has despaired of his chances of ever winning another big one, the same can't be said of Arnie.

"I don't remember when I've worked harder for a tournament —that is, in a connentrated period," Palmer said Monday.

"I've played 20 days in a row now. Since Thursday when I arrived here, I've played at least 27 holes a day.

"I'll guarantee you—when I tee up the ball Thursday I'll know all that's possible to know about my game. I'll be as physically ready as I can be."

As for his psychological condition, that may be something else.

"I haven't really been confident in a long time," he added.

New Catcher Hotel Hero

"Where've you been?", is the question the Churchill Hotel entry in the Major Men's Softball League may be asking new catcher Jim Burnett today.

Burnett provided the spark Monday night at Central Park as the Hotelmen checked in with their first triumph of the season.

Burnett climaxed a six-run outburst in the sixth inning with a three-run homer and picked off two rival runners as Churchill defeated Butler Brothers 8-5.

Burnett also banged out a single in his first appearance with Churchill.

Russ Minnis gained credit for the victory although tagged for nine hits, including a home run by Reg Underwood. Underwood, the league's leading hitter, padded his healthy average with a two-for-two performance.

Tillicums Charge To Catch Stockers

Tillicum Club spotted Stockers North Americans a six-run lead then fought back to salvage a 6-6 tie in the only game played Monday night in the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League at Hyacinth Park.

The tie enabled Stockers to snap a three-way deadlock for the lead with Empress Paint and Cablevision and gave them sole possession of first place.

Surrey Tops Macs

SURREY — Improving Surrey Salmonbellies dashed Victoria MacDonalds' aspirations of taking over first place Monday night administering a 13-8 defeat to the Island visitors in a Pacific Junior A Lacrosse League game at the Recreation Centre.

Victory moved Surrey ahead of Coquitlam and is the first time they have vacated the cellar all season.

Salmonbellies broke a 6-6 knot in the second period outscoring Victoria 5-1 for an 11-7 lead after 40 minutes. Bryan Hazelwood and Don Brown paced Surrey with three goals each.

Orr Won't Be Ready To Play for Canada

BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Orr, generally recognized as the National Hockey League's most valuable property, said Monday he doesn't plan to accompany the Canadian team to Russia for a series of games with the Soviet Union's Olympic champions.

"I don't think I'll go over there if I can't play," the Boston Bruins' outstanding defenceman said during a news conference at Massachusetts General Hospital.

"I'd like to go, but it wouldn't make much sense," Orr said. "I might just as well stay home and work out."

Orr, who underwent surgery on his left knee last Tuesday, led the Bruins to their second Stanley Cup championship in three years last month despite the injury. He probably will be discharged from the hospital today and plans to fly to his home in Parry Sound, Ont., Thursday.

A fishing enthusiast, Orr said he has rods and reels "all ready" for his return home.

He spent some uncomfortable days after the surgery, but said he "feels great" now, despite being in a wheelchair.

"The doctors have assured me everything is all right," he said. "I went to Florida for a vacation, feel good and am anxious to get going for next season. I may not be able to do too much, but I'll be with Mike Walton at our boys' summer hockey camp."

Dr. Carter Rowe, who performed the surgery on the Bruins' 24-year-old star, said that "spurs on the inside of the knee, pinching a cartilage," were removed in the operation.

"We hope we've given Bobby a lot more mileage," Dr. Rowe said. "He has been just a wonderful patient. He's so concerned with other patients, especially with paralysed people. He's very generous with his time and sits down and talks with other patients."

Orr will have to hobble with splints on his leg for the next two or three weeks. Then he will wear a brace for the summer, taking special therapy treatment and swimming a lot before donning skates again in September.

"He will not be ready for the series between Canada and Russia in the two countries in the fall," Dr. Rowe said. "However, the outlook for the 1972-73 season is excellent."

Brentwood Tops Senior Section In Swim Meet

Brentwood College and St. Michaels University School split division titles at the B.C. senior independent school swim meet at Brentwood College Sunday.

Brentwood piled up 116 points to win the senior division by 10 points over St. Michaels (106).

St. Michaels, led by triple-winner Bob Wright, won the under-16 crown by just one point over Brentwood. The winners had 112 points.

Colwood Team Leads

Kay Tribe of Uplands, with a 79, was low gross winner in a field of 72 entrants. Mildred Green of Glen Meadows had 80 and Mrs. McCormick shot a 81.

Ivey Worth of Uplands had a low net of 62 and Freda Bond of Meadows and Daima Mann of Victoria were next at 63.

Jane Given Slim Chance To Win Battle in Court

MIAMI (AP) — Bob Toski, who coached the 26-year-old Jane Blalock, says he believes she has little chance of winning her court battle against the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

Miss Blalock was handed a one-year suspension on June 1 for "unethical conduct." She immediately filed a $5 million dollar anti-trust suit against the LPGA and obtained a court injunction allowing her to play in LPGA tournaments.

"The LPGA has movies of her breaking rules," Toski said in an interview with the Miami Herald. "Nearly all the other players say they will testify against her, and even spectators have offered to serve as witnesses. I'll be amazed if she wins her suit."

Miss Blalock has been accused of moving her ball away from a spike mark on the green during the Bluegrass Invitational tournament and not calling a two-stroke penalty on herself.

"I think Janie got into this habit subsconsciously. She has a compulsion to win. I believe she needs psychiatric help," Toski told the Herald.

"I've tried to talk to her by telephone but I can't reach her," he added. "The other girls never mentioned anything to me before because they knew I was her friend. Now they tell me this has been going on for some time and they have affidavits, pictures, everything to prove their side. Janie has been given three warnings."

Bud Erickson, LPGA executive director, told the Herald that the committee had tried to protect Miss Blalock from a public scandal.

Ride That Bus? . . . Not Denny

DENNY McLAIN . . . problems continue

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Denny McLain's Birmingham team-mates rumble up to Savannah's decaying baseball park in a bus after killing several hours at their $9-a-night motel.

"How you like my 'team bus,' boys?" he says with a grin.

McLain has spent the day golfing at the plush Savannah Inn and Country Club where he is living in a $75-a-day suite with Chuck Dobson, another former major leaguer who also has found himself in the bush leagues.

HIT PITCHING SKIES

A 31-game winner in 1968, Denny has hit the skids as a pitcher. Hit hard early this season with Oakland Athletics, the one-time Detroit Tigers wonderboy was shipped to Birmingham, Ala., of the Class AA Southern League to work out his problems.

"If I hadn't thought I'd be back in the majors in a few weeks, I'd have quit," says the 28-year-old right-hander. "Anyway, who's going to give up a job that pays like I'm getting paid?"

SALARY STILL $75,000

His salary remains $75,000.

Dobson is simply getting his arm back in condition in hopes of helping Oakland in its drive for the American League West Division pennant.

For McLain, it's different.

His shoulder is inflamed. It began to hurt as far back as that golden year of 1968, but became worse as Denny struggled through a 10-22 season with Washington Senators in 1971 before being traded to the Athletics.

But, despite well-publicized woes that included a three-month suspension in 1970 for alleged association with an underworld figure, McLain still lives high.

McLain swallowed his pride long enough to take the back-breaking eight-hour bus journey from Birmingham to Savannah, but he got "lucky" when Ken (Hawk) Harrelson phoned. The colorful former major league slugger, who quit a $100,000-a-year job with Cleveland Indians for a career as a professional golfer, lives in Savannah and has McLain and Dobson lined up in big-league style.

While Birmingham unknowns bed down at the Town Motel, the two former big leaguers go to the Savannah Inn and live in style.

McLain slows down his furious social activity on the day he's due to face a Savannah Braves lineup that includes such stalwarts as Rowland Office and Scooter Blanks.

Denny has blamed his early

McLAIN LIVES IN STYLE

season shortcomings on pills that were designed to rid his body of excess water. The pills cut his potassium content nearly in half.

"I'm stronger now. . . . The old zip was coming back the last time I pitched."

His first two Southern League attempts, both against Montgomery Rebels, were disastrous. McLain allowed 16 runs in 11 innings.

Then came a solid performance, seven innings against Knoxville that saw the demoted super-star allow only one run and three hits. He struck out eight.

McLain didn't suspect a relapse as he strutted to the mound at Grayson Stadium. A crowd of 3,400 was in the stands, far above the average 500 drawn in the Southern League.

One inning later, however, McLain's world caved in.

A walk, a single, a wild pitch and a double resulted in two runs. Another wild pitch and a sacrifice fly scored another. Then, the killing blow—a three-run homer—was delivered by opposing pitcher Chuck Sprinkle.

The toll: 12 runs, 12 hits, four homers, two wild pitches. Birmingham lost 14-0.

"My report," said Birmingham manager Phil Cavarretta, "will be exactly what I saw . . . a man pitching with no real velocity, no real control and a man who must be hurting inside."

Others will be hurt, McLain said, when his new book is published.

"I'm writing a book," he said. "It will tell all . . . and I mean all. Several people will be brutually hurt by it; but they deserve to be hurt."

Meanwhile, there's the business of playing with the junior Athletics, a team that had lost six straight and 35 of its first 54 games.

McLain said he's eager for another mound start, something to heal the wounds from that 14-0 debacle at Savannah.

"I'll be back," he keeps saying. But each time he is pounded in the minors, the return to Oakland drops a bit farther into an uncertain future.

Brad Takes Sprint

BURNABY — Victoria star Brad Yakubowich and two former Victorians now attending university elsewhere won events Sunday at the 24th annual Open Vancouver Relays at Simon Fraser University.

Yakubowich, in Grade 11 at Mt. Douglas and B.C. high school sprint champion, again beat arch rival Albin Dukoski to take first place in the open men's 100 metres.

Yakubowich raced over the finish line in 10.8 seconds for his second win in a week over the Vancouver College ace.

Bob McLaren, now attending Oregon State University, won the 400-metrees, in 54.3 seconds and Murray Keating, formerly of Mt. Doug and now at SFU, topped the hammer throw with a heave of 187 feet 11¾ inches.

Other Victorians fared well in the field events as veteran Roger Ruth placed second in the pole vault and Lorna McHattie was runner-up in the discus, and third in both the javelin and shotput.

Patty Loverock of Vancouver equalled the meet record as she won the women's 100 metres in 11.6 seconds.

Three other Vancouver athletes posted victories in women's events as Brenda Eisler won the long jump, Wendy Taylor took the 100-metre hurdles and Jean Sparling set the pace in the 200-metre hurdles, in which Victoria's Nancy Chamberlayne placed third.

BRILLIANT DISPLAY BY AUSSIE BOWLER

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Dennis Lillee, Australian fast bowler, was brilliant against the English batters Monday, but the Australian tourists retained only an outside chance of beating the host team in the first cricket test match.

Lillee took six wickets for 66, including three in four deliveries in the afternoon as England was all out for 234 in its second innings. With nine hours of play left, Australia needed 342 runs for victory.

Rain began to fall as the English innings ended. After a delay, Australia made 26 for one wicket before rain came again. At the close Australia was 57 for 2 in its second innings. Tony Greig, a lanky South African, was England's outstanding batter in the second innings. He was last man out for 62.

Canucks Start Well

WORTHING, England (CP) — Canada made a promising start in the opening rounds of the singles and fours of the world bowls championships Monday.

The Canadian fours were at one stage leading the 16-team table, but Harry Figg, Canada's singles bowler, lost his rhythm after an early win and suffered two defeats later on.

In the fours, Bob Mackintosh and Jim Watkin of London, Ont., with Sam Caffyn and Robert Leadbetter from Vancouver, enjoyed two convincing wins out of three games.

They beat Malawi 18-12 and Guernsey 24-16. At this point Canada was ahead of the remainder of the field in the fours. Later, however, the Canadians were unable to sustain their winning streak when Jersey snatched an easy victory against them 24-17.

In the singles, Harry Figg of Edmonton opened proceedings with a neck-and-neck tussle with Jersey which Canada finally won 21-20. Figg lost his other games 21-13 against Guernsey and 21-18 against Malawi. Canada occupies 12th position in the singles table.

'Understand The Workers'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Labor strife in British Columbia can be headed off by understanding the needs of workers — and it is far more than big pay cheques, a Minnesota personnel expert said in Victoria today.

Dr. Herbert G. Heneman said giant confrontations are the result of pent-up hostilities because the individual needs of workers have been overlooked over a long period of time.

"Employers make a mistake if they think the only thing an employee wants is more money. There could be any number of things bothering him."

He said labor troubles across the United States and the confrontations with woodworkers and construction workers in B.C. could be prevented by a new approach to industrial relations.

This would feature taking surveys of what your own employees want from the company in terms of working conditions and job satisfaction, he said.

Too often a company will try in Victoria what some other firm is doing in New York or Toronto.

"Instead of borrowing ideas from the east, employers should look inside their own plants for ideas — from the workers themselves," he said.

Dr. Heneman is chairman of the University of Minnesota's Industrial Relations Centre. He is in Victoria to conduct a one-day seminar for personnel managers at the University of Victoria.

A panel also participating in the seminar consisted of George Wheaton, contractor; Gordon Winter of B.C. Forest Products, Mary Henderson of Woodward Stores Ltd., and Terry Fitzpatrick, city of Victoria personnel manager.

Dr. Henneman said personnel management is the fastest-growing profession next to teaching.

And research, he said, is its number one need. An employer could be spending up to $2,000 per employee on fringe benefits — holidays, medical plans, etc. — and only an average $1 per employee on research.

"That's like betting 2,000 to 1 on voodoo and witchcraft. Research is the key to industrial relations and it is the part that is being overlooked."

He said the payoffs for employers for listening to the needs of workers would be high morale and higher profits.

Pollen, Savage Clash Over One-Way Plan

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen and Ald. Clyde Savage crossed swords today on the question of whether city council should introduce one-way traffic systems in Government and Wharf Streets on a trial basis.

Pollen insisted the scheme would be no more than a short-term solution to traffic congestion in that area, and that council should be looking at a total traffic plan for Victoria.

But Savage said no one would know if the conversion to one-way traffic in the two streets would be a success until it was tried, and the situation was serious enough to warrant immediate action.

"We're hardly moving cars at all there now," he said. "The cars are here — we've got to do something with them."

The suggestion to make Wharf one-way southbound and Government one-way northbound came to council's from the Central Business District Advisory Committee, as endorsement of a view originally put forward by the Downtown Business Association.

When Savage moved that a recommendation for approval go to council, Pollen countered with the suggestion that the Advisory Planning Commission should first be asked for its views.

The mayor said all the proposal would achieve would be to move traffic 18 per cent faster, and improve matters for the next two to three years.

"I think we should have an overview of the whole traffic situation and not just look at this in isolation," he said.

Unconvinced, Savage pointed out that the city's experts in the traffic department had come out in favor of one-way traffic to reduce congestion in the area, where the "damnable problem" was left turns at traffic lights.

Pollen then turned his guns on the provincial government, saying there has been no indication of its plans on dispersal of government office accommodation and other important matters which would affect the preparation of a comprehensive traffic and transportation study.

"We have no dialogue, no communication whatsoever," he said, noting that the Capital Regional Board has received no reply to its proposal to take over B.C. Hydro bus services in Greater Victoria.

The proposal to make Wharf and Government one-way streets was finally referred to council's committee of the whole.

CITY PLANNERS REJECT HOTEL BID

Victoria's planning committee today endorsed a planning department recommendation to reject a rezoning application for a proposed 80-room hotel at Hillside and Doncaster.

A report from the city planner said the zoning change sought was not compatible with council's policy on suburban commercial uses permitted in the general area of the Hillside shopping centre.

Concern was also expressed at the meeting that the 81 parking spaces provided would be inadequate if all the hotel's facilities, including banqueting rooms and beer parlor, were used to capacity.

Devotion Pays Off 8 Times

Eight healthy ducklings out of 10 eggs isn't bad, mother, wherever you are.

That's the score at the SPCA shelter today and the beady-eyed little quackers splashing about there don't even know how dicey their arrival was.

They owe their mum a lot but she isn't around to tell them.

The great big drills came nearer and nearer — but she wouldn't budge. At last, SPCA Inspector Don Adams had to move the nest to safety. For the hen mallard it was the last straw. She took off.

Determined that all that devotion wasn't going to be wasted, Adams took the eggs home to his incubator. Late Sunday they began hatching and now the ducklings are cavorting in their own pen at the SPCA, with their own swimming pool and a diet of algae water and ground-up water bugs.

Four to six weeks from now when they are feathered, the ducks will be released in some sheltered location like Beacon Hill Park.

Meanwhile Adams has had to contend with some crank phone calls, one as late as midnight. One woman demanded to know what he was going to get out of the whole business "besides a duck dinner."

Saanich Set to Use New Housing Measures

If there is any opportunity at all in proposed federal housing amendments, "Saanich will be on board," Mayor Hugh Curtis promised today.

Although lack of details at this point makes it hard to speculate, the mayor commented in broad terms on proposals introduced Monday by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford.

Curtis said he was particularly interested in financing proposals for the improvement of services, for day care centres, for providing open space and community facilities.

"If this has any application in Saanich we'll be on board," the mayor said.

GOOD RECORD

He observed that the municipality had demonstrated a record of taking part wherever possible in programs of assistance offered by the senior governments.

An important part of Basford's legislation appears to be the encouragement of rehabilitating or improving communities rather than levelling old buildings to make way for new structures.

The bill would also make funds available for individuals and landlords at preferred rates of interest for improving existing accommodation or for acquisition of homes for those of low income.

"I'm interested in . . . any assistance making it easier for people to get into a home, improve it or to stay in that home," Curtis said. Such aid is "positive legislation."

He noted that president Desmond Newman, of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, hoped there would be consultation with the municipalities on the legislative changes.

Curtis, who is a director of the federation, said he agreed with Newman and expects the CFMM will canvass its directorate.

Aid to municipalities for provision of services would be most welcome in Saanich, the mayor felt.

"In a municipality such as Saanich, because we are so large in land area, and with an almost unbelieveable increase in auto traffic, we are lagging in sidewalk construction programs," Curtis said.

The rehabilitation sections he thought would be more applicable to older, more concentrated cities rather than the suburban type of situation.

Curtis felt the parts relating to home acquisition for those of low income levels were fine as far as that goes, but he added:

"What is needed is low-interest loans for most prospective homeowners. Moderate income people are finding it very difficult to get started when you are talking about 9½ and 10 per cent interest and higher.

"One of the continuing tragedies facing young people today is getting into their first home and out of rental accommodation," Curtis said.

The mayor also voiced some caution, noting that 1972 is an election year.

Ask The Times

Q. Must go-kart track operators limit the speed of the cars. If so, what is the maximum? A.M.

A. Go-karts are unlicenced vehicles that do not travel on public roads. Therefore, the motor vehicles branch doesn't restrict their operation. The only go-kart operator in Victoria is the Capital City Go-Kart Club which holds races every Saturday afternoon at Western Speedway.

Mayor Townsend, secretary of the club, said the object of the races is to break previous speed records so there are no speed limits. She said some of the go-karts travel at over 100 miles an hour and some in the United States even faster.

Q. Why did old-time sailors wear gold ear-rings in their left ear? — G.C.

A. Sailors wore ear-rings if they had survived a wreck, or if they had rounded Cape Horn under sail.

Grassroots Planning Suggested for City

If Victoria is to avert "disaster" in future development, local communities must have a say in the over-all planning process, city council's planning committee was told today.

A brief submitted by the James Bay Community Association urged the establishment of "local area commissions," representing identifiable local areas such as James Bay and Victoria West, to work in conjunction with the city's Advisory Planning Commission.

The association said the seven-member commissions, appointed by the mayor and council, should consist of residents from the area including businessmen, students, housewives, pensioners, and representatives of local citizens' and ratepayers' groups.

"Terms of reference for the commissions would be to provide feed-back from the area concerned regarding planning matters referred to them by city council; to communicate with the areas' residents and to recommend, from time to time, studies that would assist council in its planning decision," the brief stated.

"Planning matters which would normally require the attention of the existing Advisory Planning Commission would then be simultaneously referred to the local area commission representing that area directly."

Both bodies would report their views to council, which would be able to "balance the neighborhood's view with the concerns of the whole community."

Without such a system in operation, the brief said, the city's development will continue to be planned by people who are unfamiliar with local areas' specific problems.

Another recommendation in the brief was that the Advisory Planning Commission's terms of reference should be enlarged to allow it to serve as "an architectural review board, providing council with advice as to the esthetic worth of projects as well as technical advice."

The association also said it is "vitally necessary to the spirit involving the citizenry more directly in the planning process" that the APC's proceedings should be open to the press.

Sam Bawlf, chairman of the association's planning committee, was told by Ald. Clyde Savage that there was "a lot of merit" in the proposals, but planning committee chairman Ald. Mike Young was doubtful whether local commissions could be set up as separate entities.

Young also expressed fears that the proposed process might lead to an even greater "plethora" of reports than are now produced.

Alderman 'Fair' After Heart Attack

Esquimalt Ald. Jack Gourlay, 48, is in fair condition this morning in Royal Jubilee Hospital after suffering a heart attack Friday afternoon.

A spokesman for the alderman said Gourlay was being examined by Dr. Reginald Forth, a consultant in heart diseases, when the attack occurred. Dr. Forth called an ambulance and Gourlay was rushed to the nearby hospital.

Gourlay, a B.C. Hydro employee, was elected to Esquimalt council last year and is chairman of the municipality's parks, playgrounds and boulevards sub-committee.

Then Guess What She's Going to Do . . .

WE HAVE A DO-IT-YOURself lady in this town who paused in a renovating chore a while ago to seek professional advice about bathroom showers. The supplier whom she phoned was more than merely courteous. He made her feel downright good. But he was involved with a customer at the moment: could he call her back or would she prefer to hang on?

Having hit a live one, our matron didn't want to lose him. A second or two later she became aware that the receiver she had parked atop of her recipe file was loosing a trickle of conversation into her kitchen.

"Most people are pretty nice to deal with," the man who knew about showers was saying to his customer, "but every so often you run into a real stinker. When that happens, I remember some advice my boss gave me when I was a young salesman."

The lady could have given him some advice too, which is to remember that telephones transmit vocies even when the receiver is a safe-seeming distance from the mouth. She listened, all ears.

"On my first day, he told me that along with the nice people I would meet some real so-and-so's. I was to listen to them, be polite to them, and treat them as if they were human beings. Then, as soon as I was clear of someone like that, I was to turn around and spit. It would relieve my feelings. I've done that ever since — and do you know, he was right!"

It also sounded like wise advice to the scout who sought, and got, cheerfully-delivered information about showers.

I intend to treat the next sourpuss I meet like a human being," says she. "Then guess what I'm going to do."

★

This one should go to the tune of 'Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head'. It concerns 15 hard-working men and women from Arbutus Crafts for the Disabled, who weren't robbed of their last-Saturday treat by a touch of inclement weahter.

The Arbutus Craft wheelchair set was due for a tour of lovely Butchart Gardens, an undertaking that required something special in the way of arrangements.

A corps of wheelchair pushers was needed. No problem there — a call to Principal Gordon Taylor of Mount Newton Junior Secondary school did the trick. Fifteen student volunteers offered to plow their Saturday into wheelchair piloting duty.

The day came, and with it the rain. Perhaps the tour should be postponed until the weather mended. But the workers would be disappointed, and the students of the volunteer squad weren't to be daunted by weeping skies.

The tour proceeded, wheelchair riders protected by umbrellas, the kids with raindrops falling on their heads. Today, I'm asked to pass on the Arbutus Crafters' warmest thanks to their student pilots.

"They were wonderful," the message runs, "and they helped make it a day to remember."

David Groos, MP for Victoria, has sounded his own grim warnings about the oil trouble our coast may be in for if the Valdez-Cherry Point tanker route is adopted in spite of Canadian protests. Last week, with the Cherry Point spill to underline his argument, Groos urged an improved system of in-harbor oil handling.

"Loading and off-loading could be made into much safer operations, he told me, "if tankers were worked into tidal basins, as they are in European ports. That's the way the operation should be conducted on this coast."

Any spillage from a tanker isolated in this fashion can be contained and mopped up within the basin. Neighboring shorelines and inshore waters don't bear the brunt of a spill.

That's it, and off now for a ceremonial burning of surplus paper, including one of Canada's more impressive collections of rejection slips. Heartbreakers all — and why did I ever save them?

MISERABLE MONDAY BROKE CHILLY RECORD

A miserable day Monday?

The weatherman said today maximum temperature was a chilly 54 degrees.

The previous low was in 1952 when it was 57. Normal temperature for the day, said the weatherman, is 65.

And the forecast is no great shakes. In the next few days, the weatherman said the temperature will stay in the low 60s.

Gold Medal For Ann

23-Year-old author Ann Blades.

MONTREAL (CP) — A 19-year-old school teacher who was refused support by the Canada Council for the publication of her book received the top award open to a Canadian children's book.

Ann Blades, now of Vancouver, wrote Mary of Mile 18 as a reflection of life in the tiny Mennonite community far up the Alaska Highway where she taught.

The gold medal of the Canadian Library Association was presented Sunday at the association convention in Regina. It is awarded by vote of children's librarians across the country.

When Miss Blades applied for assistance in publication, the Canada Council replied that its reports were not favorable, and the book did not contain enough information about Mennonites, a spokesman for the book's Montreal publisher said.

How to Cope With Future Shock

David King, director of the managerial and productivity centre at the University of British Columbia, warned delegates to the Canadian Dietetic Association's annual convention that they will have to learn new thought patterns and problem solving techniques to cope with life in a post-industrial society.

Massive Changes

He said "great and massive changes" already taking place in society are more significant than those caused by the industrial revolution.

King believes that within the next generation free enterprise industries will disappear and be replaced by social service industries and government-initiated activities.

He says only four countries have the technological potential to enter this post-industrial era. They are the United States, Canada, Sweden and Japan.

He predicts that the average per capita income in these countries will be from $7,000 to $20,000 a year and citizens will work a seven hour day for only three or four days a week.

"This will mean 147 work days and 218 free days a year," King said.

He says people will have to be educated to make the best use of this leisure time.

"The educational system hasn't changed in 1,000 years. Schools should be teaching children to use television and computers that are already a part of their world."

King says people will have to develop new thinking patterns to keep up with advances in technology.

"Traditional step by step thinking is too slow today," he said.

Jump Stages

"I've seen discoveries made by jumping whole stages considered necessary in the scientific approach. When the right answer is found you go back and fill in the gaps."

He pointed out that children often have this problem-solving ability.

"Little kids can think in peculiar fashions that enable them to cope with original answers," King said.

He explained that although the traditional approach to problem solving involves starting at the beginning and working towards a solution step by step, "problems can be solved from either end." King says a "little reverse thinking can often lead to a solution more quickly."

He says that the aim of education should be teaching people to make creative decisions. "People must be taught to use their abilities and powers," King said.

He pointed out that this ability to make creative decisions will be of vital importance to people living in a post-industrial society where they will have more holidays than working days in a year.

"People will have to work out their own personal goals and plan their futures step by step in order to lead satisfying lives."

King says management and government will have to educate people so that they can make the best use of technology and leisure time.

"Nobody has shown people how to use leisure time and retirement," he said.

Guest Speakers

Guest speakers at this afternoon's session were to be Dr. Lewis Lloyd, dean of the faculty of Home Economics at the University of Manitoba, speaking on the role of the nutritionist in community health centres, and Mrs. Suzanne Hendricks, rescribing the work of the national survey, Nutrition Canada.

This evening at 8:30 p.m. delegates will attend the annual memorial lecture of the Violet Ryley-Kathleen Jeffs Foundation at the University of Victoria.

Father Trafford P. Maher, S.J., founder and director of the Human Relations Centre for Training and Research at St. Louis University, will speak on the topic, Personal Social Health.

The convention continues through Thursday, June 15.

Combat Raw Sex

DEAR ABBY: Everybody keeps talking about how dirty the movies are nowadays, but nobody does anything about it.

I think that every time we see an "X" or "R" rated movie advertised, we should write to the president of the studio that made that movie and tell him that this is one movie our family will not be seeing. And when they start making clean movies, we will be glad to see them.

If you printed this letter, Abby, and people all across the country started writing letters, do you think it might help to get all this raw sex out of the movies? — Disgusted

DEAR DISGUSTED: It might. But how do we get the "raw sex" out of the balconies and drive-ins?

DEAR ABBY: We are grandparents in our 60s. We have two married children who live in a city not too far from us. We never go there uninvited, so it cannot be said that we make pests of ourselves.

We have heard that they have come to our city to shop, or visit, but they haven't even bothered to call us. We have the usual family get-togethers at our home for Christmas and Easter, but they never stay very long, and we are made to feel that they regard it more a duty than a pleasure to be with us.

We send them and our grandchildren gifts, which are seldom acknowledged.

What has happened to the manners and Christian love we taught them? We denied ourselves many things so they could both have good educations to prepare them for the fine professions they now practice so successfully.

On those few occasions when we go to their homes they do not even have the courtesy to see us to the door when we leave.

Please, Abby, tell us where we have failed? — Unappreciated And Neglected

DEAR U AND N: Don't assume that YOU have failed. THEY have failed. Occupy yourself with other things and don't dwell on their lack of appreciation and neglect. If the calamity doesn't overcome you, feeling sorry for yourselves will.

Poverty in Canada Matter of Choice

EDMONTON (CP) — A government-sponsored study concludes that the greatest tragedy of poverty in Canada is that it isn't necessary.

The study by the Human Resources Research Council of Alberta says, however, that there are no magic solutions to poverty in Canada.

"Poverty in Canada is not a mere superficial blemish on an otherwise healthy social and economic order, but is the result of some basic deficiencies in the way we allocate resources, evaluate personal worth and reward achievement," the report says.

It suggests that economic growth will not in itself eliminate poverty because increased national growth will not insure income to the aged or the disabled.

The report calls for more political action to fight poverty.

"In large part, the triumph over poverty has become a political matter involving a choice or decision to be taken at the political level, since we already possess the wherewithal for eradicating poverty, the crucial problem becomes one of inducing the people in power positions to make appropriate decisions that will allocate a higher priority to the speedy elimination of poverty."

The Human Resources Research Council, set up by the former Social Credit administration, is being eliminated by the new Progressive Conservative government.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — When a computer goof enrolled Harold Jones in an all-girl stenography class in high school, he made the best of it, scored an A and today is the only male stenographer for the California legislature.

"He does a beautiful job," reports Madge Alberti, boss of the assembly steno pool of 15 secretaries, all women until now. "He's very fast. He has a very pleasant personality. The girls just love him."

The computer foulup occurred when Jones was 16 years old and a star hurdler on the Sacramento High School track team.

If you learn rescue breathing, you will know what to do if you suddenly find yourself vis-a-vis a victim of drowning, asphyxiation or electric shock. This technique, probably the most effective method of reviving such victims, can be mastered by anybody.

A small folder, the size of a credit card, explains with a few words and pictures what is involved. I suggest you carry it with you in your wallet and whenever you have a few moments, study it. It won't take very long before you know what to do in an emergency.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Forces appear scattered. You are asked to do many things — too many at once. Sagittarian is in picture. Accent is on travel, philosophy, publishing, long-distance calls and long-range plans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Investment potential should be analyzed. Get aid from expert. Dig deep. Reject what is superficial. Applies also to personal relationships. Stress now is on what is obscured, hidden or mysterious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spotlight is on partnership, joint efforts and marriage. If single, you may be asked to commit yourself. If married, mate may make unusual demand. Married or single, this is time to observe, learn and decide.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make peace at home. Study Aquarius message. Be diplomatic. Improve relations with Taurus, Libra individuals. Get essential tasks out of way early. Check medical, dental appointments. Take nothing for granted.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are perceptive, somewhat of a busybody, charming, often the life of the party, prone to involvement in affairs of heart. Social life is going full swing; in July you will make new contacts and be on "different" wave length. You now have much to do with Sagittarius.

How to Avoid Salami —With Turkey Gravy

We have found that the only way to enjoy our last dinner before moving is to eat it at someone else's house.

When you eat your last meal at home, you feel morally obligated to finish up all the ghastly bits and pieces of wilted, spotty stuff hanging about in the refrigerator. Personally, I've never found any particularly exciting recipes which call for three chunks of picked cauliflower, half a cup of chicken noodle soup, and a lump of what looks like either cheese or salt pork.

Besides, moving is a grim enough process anyway, without being forced to perch on a box labeled "This End Up" and eat salami in turkey gravy on rye bread heels.

Of course, I can't very well telephone a friend and say, "Wouldn't you like to have us over for dinner the night before we leave?" No, its much better to say, "We'd love to have you and Fred over for dinner next Tuesday night, but we move on Wednesday . . ." and let my voice trail off wistfully.

Once we succeeded in cadging an invitation, the only remaining problem arose in finding appropriate clothing, as everythig decent was either in a suitcase or sealed in the box marked "bathmats."

Even though we have been close friends with our hosts for the past five years, our children and theirs nurture such a mutual loathing that they are given to wreaking physical violece of each other's bodies.

I pressed my jar of pickled cauliflower into her hand.

"You shouldn't have," she demurred. "Actually, it will go just beautifully with dinner. I fixed a fantastic new recipe called Thanksgiving Salami. You take this turkey gravy . . ."

We Even Have Josephine's Couch . . .

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Thanks to generations of English settlers who brought possessions with them to Victoria, our city is a mecca for antique hunters.

For 50 years, Victoria has been famous for antiques, and today it has more than 30 shops selling everything from grandfather clocks to biscuit tins.

But good pieces aren't as plentiful as they were 50 years ago, and prices have soared.

The city's real specialty is Georgian furniture — English furniture made between 1750 and 1850, probably the greatest English furniture-making period in history.

Because only one Vancouver shop carries Georgian furniture, many Vancouver antique hunters come over here, says Mrs. Felicity Graham. Mrs. Graham helps her mother, Mrs. Faith Grant, with an antique furniture business she started on Fort St. in 1929.

"We have almost no local buyers," said Mrs. Graham. Victoria hasn't a large population of middle-aged, middle-income people who want to buy and can afford antiques, she explained. Retired people usually have their furniture and most young people can't afford period pieces, she added.

Buyers come from all over the continent, especially from the prairies and American west coast. A few London dealers come here and ship things back to England, says Mrs. Graham.

When Mrs. Grant started her business, most customers were older people. Today they are of all ages.

She says Victoria's antiques aren't being exhausted because English people continue to come here to settle, bringing old English furniture with them. When they die, estate sales put this furniture on the market.

"There's some good stuff in Victoria, but it's all in private homes," said Al Beardshaw, a 40-year-old veteran in the antiques business. For instance, somewhere in the city there's a couch that belonged to Napoleon's wife Josephine, but it's never appeared on the market, he said.

In the last 10 years, Victoria residents have realized that antiques are a good investment. As a result, they're hanging onto them, said Beardshaw.

Beardshaw has been the city's only French polisher for 26 years — he thinks he's probably the only one in North America. A French polisher is "the ultimate in finishing", he said. He is to an ordinary finisher what a cabinet maker is to a carpenter.

His specialty is matching exact colors of wood when restoring and repairing antiques, a craft that involved eight years' apprenticeship in England. Besides local business, Beardshaw does work for people like singer Dennis Day, who brings old music boxes on from California to be restored.

His wife, Wyn, has been an antique furniture dealer for 10 years, specializing in late Georgian and Victorian pieces.

Unlike other local dealers, she gets all her furniture from England, where four sisters scour the country looking for pieces. Having them shipped doubles the price paid in England.

"Even in England, they're getting hard to find," Mrs. Beardshaw said. An increasing number of German and Japanese buyers are descending upon England looking for antiques, she explained.

"It takes a lifetime to learn a tenth of what's involved in antiques," said Mrs. Beardshaw. "That's the reason people specialize."

Some dealers specialize in old silver, and china, some in Georgian furniture, some in antique jewelry. Dealer Rosemary Wells has a collection of old dolls dating from about 1890 to 1930.

These aren't novelties for the casual tourist. Craven's clocks cost anywhere from $400 to $7,000. And a real Georgian bookcase will cost you several thousand dollars.

One dealer, Roger Newberry, specializes in old English tins — biscuit tins, tobacco tins, you name it. He also has military medals and badges, cigarette cards, old Chinese paper money, stamps, Chinese vases, sets of dishes.

Newberry and other local dealers used to buy much of their stock at auctions, but in the last few years soaring auction prices have kept dealers away.

"Now the auctions compete with us," he said.

Mrs. Faith Grant (middle) sells antique china to customers.

'Justice' Solution to Crime

HALIFAX (CP) — Isabel Macneill is considered one of the most knowledgeable women in Canada on the treatment and rehabilitation of female law-breakers.

It's been six years since she resigned as superintendent of the federal prison for women at Kingston, Ont., but her interest in the welfare and correction of female criminals remains.

Since her retirement, Miss Macneill has spent her time preparing briefs for a number of national and foreign studies of criminology and making personal visits to other countries to look into penal reform.

"The solution to crime is justice," she suggested in an interview. "Not justice in the exclusive sense — laws, the police, judiciary and correctional institutions — but a social justice that begins early in life.

Miss Macneill, now 64 and living in a 200-year-old home at Mill Village, N.S., notes that most criminals show anti-social tendencies in childhood.

For this reason, she says a new approach to juveniles must be implemented. The law identifies children as "law-breakers, although it is doubtful if a child of 10 to 14 years is capable of forming criminal intent."

Society classes young offenders as delinquents and, "in too many cases, isolates them from society in institutions with other delinquents."

Miss Macneill, a graduate of Mount Saint Vincent University here and Heartherly's in London, England, disputes this method of dealing with the young law-breaker.

"If there is any relationship between cause and effect, the first step in reducing criminality in Canada would appear to be the institution of preventive services for children," she says.

It was worthwhile to emphasize the positive qualities of offenders, to help them regain self-confidence. Forced to think for themselves and to make decisions, offenders were better prepared to join society as stronger persons, not easily led or misled and not so dependent on others.

"No one is a criminal and nothing else," says Miss Macneill. "What else they are and might become is more important than what they have done."

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

5 CARDS OF THANKS

At some time or other the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. We are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you who did so much to help us through this time. Special thanks to Rev. W. E. Greenhalgh and McCall Bros. — Mrs. Jessie Keebie, and family.

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many friends and relatives for their kindness to us during our recent bereavement of the sudden passing of our beloved husband and father, William H. Matthews. Also many thanks for the beautiful floral offerings and contributions to the heart fund. — (Mrs.) Muriel Matthews; Bob Matthews.

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends and neighbors to know how much their kind words of expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our son and brother, Douglas Edwin Siebert; The Schaap Family.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Problems of Persons With Ostomies

An ostomate is a person who, perhaps because of the removal of a cancer of his rectum, has had to have a new opening made between the bowel and the outside of the abdominal wall. This is usually on the left side of the middle abdomen.

Other persons with a severe chronic ulcerative colitis (a serious inflammation of the colon) which has not responded to treatment have had to have the colon removed. Many of these people have an ileostomy, or stoma leading out of the ileum, the lower part of the small bowel near where it empties into the large bowel.

Recently, a helpful and informative article was prepared for ostomates to answer their many questions about living comfortably with their stoma. The article tells how the ostomate can empty his stoma and then wash out the bowel. It also tells how the person can dress and cover the opening.

An ostomy patient will do well to keep a record of unusual foods he has eaten. He should also note if shortly afterward there was an unpleasant odor coming from the stoma, or an unusual amount of gas or diarrhea.

As the writers of the article say, fruit and fruit juices, as well as vegetables such as spinach and tomatoes, can cause frequent bowel movements, which are undesirable for the ostomate.

Peas, cabbage, fish, onions, radishes and cucumbers are apt to cause gas and are to be avoided. Corn on the cob may give trouble, and an excess of salt can act as a cathartic. Patients must not become alarmed right after the operation if the bowel does not behave normally. It may take some weeks before complications stop.

Because much of the gas is swallowed air, food should be eaten leisurely, and chewing gum should be avoided. Beer may act as a laxative and a gas-producer. Rapid drinking of much water or other fluid can cause diarrhea. Some foods should be taken only in small amounts, while others should be avoided entirely.

There are drugs which are helpful in quieting diarrhea — drugs such as Lomotil and codeine — which can bring relief to a person with a distressed bowel. Ostomy patients should not take laxatives.

Many persons, on learning that he or she will have to have an ostomy, will wonder if a normal sex life will be possible afterward. The answer given by the experts writing the article is that from 10 to 20 per cent of men with an ileostomy may suffer some impairment of sexual ability. This difficulty in many cases, however, is only temporary.

A man with an ostomy can be much helped by a loving and supportive woman. She must accept him and show him that he is as desirable after his operation as he was before.

GOLFER'S DELIGHT
Friends, just this morning, I listed a quality home in the popular Gorge Vale area. The sun was out in all it's brilliance and yet I was able to find real comfort in the coolness provided by the full shade trees in the secluded rear gardens and lawns. When I entered this home to complete my inspection, I found that it contained those special features that so many people desire, but will not often find in this comfortable price range: formal dining room with Bavarian chandelier, well-placed kitchen and plush carpeting in colours that blend with the attractive decor of the bedrooms. When I say quality — I mean quality — and you will feel it as well as see it. This property has a good address and gives you all the advantages of a large shopping area, bus stops, churches, schools, playgrounds and a popular golf course within an easy stroll AND, to top it all off — financing is MOST convenient. I urge you to call without delay for "Golden Rule" service on this outstanding opportunity.

Special Invitation To Exhibit at Show

At the Victoria Horticultural Society's summer show 10 days from now, we should hear no more of "I've got better than that at home."

The society is making a special attempt to reach non-members as exhibitors. Any person with a show specimen fitting a class listed in the show catalogue is invited to enter.

A new exhibitor stands an equal chance of a first prize with the most experienced exhibitor. Gardeners new to this area have a particularly favorable chance, since "maiden blooms" from young plants in soil prepared a year or two ago are frequently finer than those from more established plants in poorer soil. This from observation of shows over the past 25 years.

* * *

Thirteen classes for plants in pot, tubs and planters are open for competition among the hundreds of apartment dwellers who have a well grown plant of gloxinia, begonia, a cactus or a succulent, a fern or several plants growing together in a planter or a tub.

The 10 days between now and the first day of the two-day show (June 23 and 24) gives you just enough time to phone the show secretary at 592-6006 for a catalogue.

You need this to check the pot plant division, classes 42 to 55 inclusive, to see where your favorite plants will best fit in.

Entry forms are part of the catalogue to be filled in by you and mailed to the show secretary postmarked not later than midnight of Tuesday, June 21.

The flowers or plants for exhibiting are then taken in for staging at the show either on Thursday evening between 7 and 10 p.m., or on Friday between 8 and 10 a.m. Judging begins at 10:30 a.m.

* * *

Reading the general show rules as well as the class rules is important as in any kind of show. There can be no fair and equable judging without conformation to pre-set rules. With these as guide lines for you and the judges, your exhibit has an equal chance with others.

Other classes open to people without gardens are in the arrangement or design section, with classes for novices. For these the flowers and accessories may be purchased. It is the design or arrangement of the material that counts.

Cash prizes, rosettes, and in some cases silver cups are awarded to prize winners, making a grand finale to the event on Saturday evening.

I would like to know that a number of new exhibitors were finding a local interest in flower shows by participating as well as visiting. They will make new acquaintances and quite possibly new friends, the foundation for a happy, fulfilled life in a new environment.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal arose in a recent rubber-bridge game, our South declarer went down a trick at his game contract. In the post-mortem analysis, it was revealed that the contract could have been made — and would have been made if an expert South player had been at the helm.

East-West vulnerable. North deals.

◊ A K Q J 10 8 4
♣ 5 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	5 ◊	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

When the dummy came into view after West had opened the jack of clubs, declarer perceived that he had three losers, one in spades and two in hearts. To fulfill his contract, it was essential that he establish a club trick, and use the nine of diamonds as an entry to cash it.

He didn't particularly care for his chances, since success depended not only on the six adversely-held clubs being divided 3-3, but also on the four outstanding trumps being divided 2-2. However, if this set-up did exist, then South could establish two club winners by ruffing a third club lead. He would then cash the trump ace, after which he would lead a trump to dummy's nine, picking up the outstanding trumps en route.

So declarer won the opening club lead with the board's king, after which he cashed the ace of clubs. Next came a third club lead, East discarding a spade. South ruffed this trick, but he was now lost. While he could get to dummy via the trump nine to ruff a fourth club, he had no way to return there to cash the board's fifth club. So he went down a trick.

If declarer had permitted West's club jack to win the opening lead, he would have obtained the timing needed to establish and cash the board's fifth club. Let's say that West led a low heart at trick two. South would have won this trick with his ace, and would next have led his remaining club to dummy's king.

A third club lead would then have been ruffed. Now would come the trump ace, followed by a trump to dummy's nine. On the ace of clubs South would discard a heart as West's last club fell. On the board's fifth club, South would discard his remaining heart. At the end, he would concede a spade trick to the defenders. His only losers would have been the club which he lost at trick one, and the spade which he would lose at the end.

Pelicans Sighted

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Between 150 and 300 California-born pelicans — feared threatened with extinction by DDT — have been sighted nesting off the Ventura coast. Dr. J. Gordon Edwards, a San Jose State University professor, said Saturday he made the observations by sea and by air on Santa Cruz Island. He also claimed seeing an "abundance" of the big sea birds on South Coronado Island south of San Diego.

Nature 'Only Cure' For Oil—Mayor

The only cure for what oil remains on three miles of Ocean Park beach appears to be a scouring by Mother Nature, Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said today.

Asked how bad pollution on the beach remains after an oil spill at the Cherry Point refinery of Atlantic Richfield 10 days ago, he said: "I don't think you or I would want to go barefoot there."

He said authorities had thought of building a road to the beach and removing the oil-coated rocks, but the federal fisheries department had said no because it would cause too much disturbance to the marine ecology along the shore.

Monday a letter was sent to the refinery listing costs to date of cleaning oil from Canadian beaches — $25,000.

Vander Zalm said that was not a final accounting and costs had only been held so low through the efforts of hundreds of volunteers.

Atlantic Richfield, which has launched a million dollar suit against the tanker agreed to pay the costs of the Canadian clean-up.

The mayor said today Surrey would work with federal and hopefully provincial authorities on any future suit for damages.

Venables, Wallace On Oil Spill Body

Pollution control director William Venables and deputy provincial secretary L. Wallace have been appointed to the British Columbia-Washington State committee on coast oil spills, Premier Bennett announced Monday.

The American appointed to the committee by Washington Governor Dan Evans is John Biggs, head of the state department of ecology.

Bennett said he hoped the committee would begin work "forthwith."

Various sources say the oil spill is now virtually cleared up. A spokesman for the Atlantic Richfield Oil Company said any oil left on the beaches at Crescent Beach and Whiterock would be cleaned up by natural action.

John Bennett, head of British Columbia Pollution Controls Ltd., said the oil on the rocks now is about 90 per cent cleaned off by seawater.

Interest Lively In View Royal Vote

An overflow crowd packed All Saints Church hall Monday night as View Royal ratepayers discussed the recently passed bylaw to incorporate the fire protection district.

Ratepayers will vote on incorporation in a referendum June 24 and the public meeting was held to supply information and answer the questions of View Royal residents.

"It was great success," said ratepayer association vice-president Joseph Sutherland. "The majority of the audience seemed very much in favor of incorporation — especially since taxes won't be going up."

Sutherland said View Royal residents are already paying a tax rate of 21 mills compared to 19½ mills in North Saanich, which has its own municipal government.

"So we're paying the piper without being able to call the tune."

Sutherland added no more meetings were planned but the association will conduct a flyer campaign before the June 12 referendum.

Arson Trial Told of Threats

Victoria county court was told Tuesday that a man charged with arson in connection with a fire in the Fleet Club building at the Naden base of CFB Esquimalt last October had made threats toward both the club and one of its officials.

Dennis Turgeon, 561 Mount View, club vice-president at the time of the incident, testified today in the judge and jury trial of Gordon Allen McLaughlin, 53, of 1355 Lyall.

He told of McLaughlin phoning him at home after McLaughlin had been suspended from the club for a second time.

Turgeon said McLaughlin sounded intoxicated and used "very harsh language."

He added: "He told me, 'I don't need you or the club and I'm going to fix you'."

Cross-examined by defence counsel Kenneth Cox, Turgeon admitted that he could not be certain in which order the words were said but asserted that McLaughlin had made the statement.

He said the first time that McLaughlin had been suspended was because "we had Eskimos down from the north and he didn't want us to serve them."

Under questioning by Cox, Turgeon asserted he had no hostility toward McLaughlin.

Asked what his duties were at the time of the incident, Turgeon said he was mainly responsible for memberships and had originally sponsored McLaughlin for associate membership in the club.

Earlier Tuesday, Capt. William Boothroyd of the base's fire department testified that he had noticed that a valve-type fitting on the return line of the oil burner in the building's boiler room had been disconnected.

Questioned by Crown counsel Brian Smith, Boothroyd said the lower part of the furnace had appeared to have a film of oil on it.

Firefighter Edmund Hornsby told Judge M. L. Tywhritt-Drake and the jury of 10 men and two women that "very dense black and brown smoke" met him when he entered the boiler room shortly before 11 that morning.

He added that he was forced to back out because he had no mask.

McLaughlin was employed as a boilerman at the time of the incident.

Another boilerman, Duncan MacCall, testified Monday that McLaughlin was working in another building Oct. 24. He said that boilermen could use the lavatory and changing rooms in the basement of the Fleet Club on weekends.

The fire occurred on a Sunday.

Self-Help Group Asks 'Burn-In'

Gonzales Beach will be cleared of logs and debris if city council approves a proposal by Victoria Self-Help Society to hold a "burn-in" Saturday, June 17.

The proposal was presented in a letter to Ald. Ove Witt, head of parks and recreational services, by Reg Clarkson, executive secretary of the self-help group. It is scheduled to come before council Thursday.

Clarkson, who organized a clean-up of Gonzales Beach which ended June 9, said his group was unable to dispose of rubbish because of an anti-smoke bylaw. Clarkson has requested permission to violate the bylaw for one day.

A petition favoring the burn-in was signed by more than 100 residents.

The matter has been discussed with Fire Chief Eric Simmons who agreed to assist with the supervision.

Clarkson plans to hire 10 three-man crews to start, feed, supervise and extinguish fires. Each crew will consist of members of a Victoria family and at least one member of the family must be registered with Canada Manpower.

The beach will be divided into sections and a crew assigned to each. Families will receive $25 and the three families doing the best clean-up will receive a further $25.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Quebec couple on a cross-Canada cycling tour pleaded guilty in provincial court Monday of shoplifting and were ordered to enrich the court's coffers by $250 from their joint travelling fund.

Pauline Provencher, 20, of Three Rivers, and Yvan Bruneau, 24, of the Quebec City suburb of Laval, tood a 49-cent bicycle repair kit, a 49-cent wrench, pant clips worth 78 cents and a $22 jacket from The Bay Saturday.

Bruneau had $600, the pair's travel money, when they were arrested.

Judge William Ostler fined Bruneau $250, and told him he was "sorry the way the trip had turned out."

He gave Miss Provencher a suspended sentence and placed her on six months' probation, after noting that the couple had already spent two days in jail and had just about enough money left after Bruneau's fine to get back to Quebec.

A woman who switched price tags on two belts in a department store was fined $250 after she was found guilty following trial on a charge of attempted fraud.

Linda Iwanik, 22, of 1030 Linden, was given two months to pay the fine.

The accused switched tags between belts priced at $5 and $6. She told a store security officer she had done it "to save the dollar."

The offence occurred at The Bay, March 25.

John D. Hatten, 16, of 2722 Shelbourne, was sentenced to five months definite and seven months indeterminate for theft involving more than $50.

Hatten, who stole 16 long-playing records from The Bay, first appeared in juvenile court and was elevated to adult criminal court.

Judge Ostler said a pre-sentence report showed the accused started using drugs at the age of 14 and at 16 was a heroin user. The judge said he "pitied" Hatten as the product of a broken home.

Ostler said he would recommend that the juvenile spend his term in the Boulder Bay forestry program of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

The accused told a probation officer he had started using drugs because he was bored with life.

Donald McCrory, 46, was charged with driving while impaired June 11 in Colwood, where he was stopped for speeding after a one-mile police chase. He also was charged with failing to provide a breath sample for a blood-alcohol test at the Colwood RCMP station.

Two city motorists were fined and given mandatory driving suspensions for impaired driving. They were Riley Richard Larson, 36, of 2815 Shakespeare, fined $400, and Kenneth Larson, 47, of 1392 St. David fined $350.

Eagle Heights Merger Vote Called June 24

DUNCAN — Eagle Heights taxpayers will vote on June 24 on amalgamating with the city of Duncan.

Residents in the area immediately south of Duncan asked city council in early May to publish a notice of intention to annex the district. They want sewers and fire protection from the city.

Although the area has 450 residents and 200 commercial and residential properties, there are only 375 eligible voters.

Voting will be at the Kokislah elementary school on June 24 while advance polls on June 22 and 23 will be at city hall.

For the referendum to pass there must be a yes vote of 51 per cent if more than 60 per cent of the eligible voters turn out. If there is less than a 60 per cent turnout, a yes vote of 60 per cent is required.

Eagle Heights residents agreed to consider amalgamating with Duncan after they found that just to have sewers supplied through the Cowichan Valley Regional District their taxes would increase on a much greater scale.

Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife said at a press conference Monday morning that if Eagle Heights is annexed to the city residents will be provided with immediate fire protection and have an adequate sewer system within one year.

"We feel we can provide fire protection to Eagle Heights residents for three mills, the same as Duncan taxpayers," Quaife said.

He said Duncan has already allowed for the acquisition of an additional fire truck in the five-year capital budget. Duncan now has three fire trucks.

Quaife said it will cost $500,000 for the city to install a sewer in Eagle Heights. Annual payments for the next 20 years will be $40,000.

The mayor said the city is prepared to share 41 per cent of the cost annually while the remaining 59 per cent is a direct charge to Eagle Heights residents.

"On the individual basis the charge will be about $30 per user per year plus the one-time connection fee of $117."

Quaife said the sewer lagoon on Trunk Road will be able to take on the extra load of the Eagle Heights sewer because it is not operating at full capacity.

When the city has aeration equipment installed this summer to eliminate a "rotten odor" coming from the lagoon, Quaife said this will also double the lagoon's capacity.

Financing has already been arranged for the project. Quaife said the $55,000 will be paid out of the city's existing annual levy of $30 for sewer.

With savings on the water rate, fire insurance and the homeowner grant added in, Quaife said the $10,000 homeowner's taxes in Eagle Heights will only increase from one dollar to $10 annually.

"The next increase for the $15,000 home will be $62 annually and the $30,000 home will be $115."

In addition to sewers and fire protection Duncan has agreed to: Give exemption from sewer hook-up to residents who have more than 150 feet to run to the nearest main, providing they agree to submit to annual inspection of their disposal systems; retain the same general land use as at present, with most of the area being zoned single dwelling; maintain roads, cut grass on verges and maintain present department of highways standard of snow removal in the Eagle Heights area; set aside at least two acres in the centre of the area for a park and playground and appoint Eagle Heights ratepayers to the city planning and recreational committees.

Old Station May Become New Museum

DUNCAN — Feasibility of converting the old CPR station in downtown Duncan into a museum to commemorate the city's 60th anniversary will be studied by council's planning and development committee.

Mayor Jim Quaife, who suggested the project, said Monday evening that the old building, which was constructed the same year the city was incorporated, "could be a historic place to house historical items."

Quaife said that A. E. Hilling, superintendent for the company, said the building could be made available to the city for a nominal fee as long as a small area is retained for the company.

Council agreed to have the committee study the building.

Duncan Withholds Gas Stand

DUNCAN — Council was advised Monday evening to take a stand on the piping of natural gas to Vancouver Island and inform the B.C. Public Utilities Commission, which is holding hearings on the project.

Donald Duguid, vice-president of Pacific Northern Gas Ltd., which is one of five groups appearing before the commission seeking the right to build a natural gas transmission line, said if this is not done by communities on the island a second set of hearings will have to be held.

"If so I am very much afraid gas service will be deferred another year or longer."

Pacific Northern Gas Ltd. is the only group applying for distribution rights within the communities, Duguid said.

Council promised to study the company's proposals but felt it could not support any company before studying all five applications.

Gunman Holds Off Police

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

CHEMAINUS — While arrangements were being made to have him committed to a mental hospital, a Chemainus man set fire to a garage Tuesday and held firemen and police at bay with a .303 rifle for more than three hours.

Sgt. P. S. Coxen of the Chemainus RCMP said today that Peder Kristian Helland, 38, has been placed in Riverview mental hospital. No charges will be laid.

"We have been well aware that the guy was getting stranger by the day and knew that when he did come back there would be trouble — and there was," Coxen said.

Coxen said police had known that Helland "had a mental disorder" but they had trouble catching up with him.

Since February "when he really started going strange," Coxen said Helland has been travelling all over Canada and the U.S.

Helland, a longshoreman, has not worked since this time.

Coxen said police had been unable to pick Helland up before because he would just return for half a day and be off again.

Coxen said that Helland's 79-year-old father Otto, who lives in the same house at 2856 Caswell, came to the police Monday morning because his son had arrived home on the weekend and was pulling "some strange capers."

Coxen said, while they were waiting to get the commitment papers signed by a local judge, they had sent an officer to Helland's neighbor, the Walter Tremblay residence at 9608 Front, to keep an eye on Helland.

Although the papers were signed by 11:15 a.m., at 11 Helland set fire to the garage. The blaze also destroyed a truck and boat.

"Unless he was given safe passage out of the country, Helland threatened to burn down the house next."

At this time reinforcements were called in from Duncan, Nanaimo and Ladysmith. Police were stationed around the house with telescopic lens as well as attempting to keep spectators out of the gunman's range.

"I knew that we had to keep him humored," Sgt. Coxen said.

"Our greatest concern was to keep him calm," Coxen said. "We were able to keep him relaxed. We just talked of foolish little things. If we had to have been there for 24 hours we'd have done just that."

Coxen said Helland never actually pointed the rifle at anyone, but he also didn't let go of it.

Around 3 p.m., after what seemed like an endless "conversation of small-talk" Coxen said Staff-Sgt. Herb Knopf, head of the Duncan detachment, talked Helland into leaving his property.

After Helland had turned his gun over to Knopf and was pushed to the ground by several officers he shouted "shoot me, shoot me."

Helland was the Chemainus man who was described as a mute when he narrowly escaped injury May 29 when his 21-foot cabin cruiser burned to the waterline and sank in Satellite Channel north of Sidney. Police said the fire started after an explosion in the boat's motor, believed caused by a leak in a gas line.

Sgt. Coxen said Helland, who is single, was not deaf but since February often posed as one.

"We in Chemainus knew better," he said.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

THE DAY THE LIGHTS WENT OFF IN PALERMO

PALERMO, Sicily (UPI) — The federal electric company turned off the lights at city hall today because the city is overdue on its hydro bill to the tune of $1.3 million. Or is it $4.25 million?

Palermo, chronically debt-ridden, disputes the higher figure decided on by a civil court, but cannot prove its case because so many of the bills have been lost.

B.C. Unemployment Up, National Figures Down

Times News Services

Unemployment in British Columbia jumped last month to eight per cent of the provincial labor force. Elsewhere in Canada, it declined.

Figures released by Statistics Canada Monday show 76,000 people without jobs in this province, compared with 71,000 in April and sharply up from 61,000 in May of last year.

According to these latest figures, B.C. with 10.1 per cent of the country's population, has 13.7 per cent of the nation's unemployed.

While the national figures are a marked improvement from April, when there were 592,000 people unemployed, the 40,000 removed from the list represents a smaller decline than usual for this time of year when construction and industry normally shift into high gear.

As a result, the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate — which is weighted to take seasonal job fluctuations into account — rose to 6.2 per cent of the labor force for May from 5.8 per cent in April.

The seasonally-adjusted trend has been inconsistent throughout 1972.

The year started with a seasonally-adjusted rate of 6.2 per cent in January, which dropped to 5.8 per cent in February, climbed again to 6.0 per cent in March, then fell to 5.8 per cent in April and bounced back up to 6.2 per cent for May.

The actual rate of unemployment for May — unadjusted to fit into this trend formula — was also 6.2 per cent, down from the unadjusted rate of 6.8 per cent in April and 6.3 per cent in May of last year.

The highest seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in recent years was recorded in September of last year when it hit 6.9 per cent of the national labor force.

One positive aspect of the May report was that the number of hard-core unemployed declined both in absolute and seasonally-adjusted terms.

There were 106,000 persons who had been out of work for seven months or longer in the middle of May, compared to 117,000 in April and 126,000 in May, 1971.

In seasonally-adjusted terms this hard-core group showed a considerable improvement, while the number unemployed for six months or less climbed.

The number of unemployed youthful workers — under age 25 — rose to 269,000 in May from 251,000 in April. It was 270,000 in May last year.

There was a sharp improvement in the unemployment picture for mature workers, particularly men. The number of unemployed men aged 25 and over declined to 219,000 from 270,000 in April.

Times News Services

Flood levels reached the peak of the century today as exhausted volunteers in Kamloops continued efforts to hold back the waters of the raging North Thompson River, which threatens to inundate some 500 homes.

Further North at Prince George, the swollen Nechako River overflowed its banks early today and the Fraser River was four inches above flood level, forcing evacuation of an estimated 150 families from low-lying areas.

Around the Kamloops area, several other communities in the Thompson Valley were threatened by the rising flood waters and scores of families were evacuated Monday from low-lying ground along the North and South Thompson rivers.

Hundreds of cattle were marooned along a 60-mile section of the valley and were in danger of drowning as river waters closed in around them.

Roads and railway lines were also affected, with the Kamloops-Edmonton highway closed and intermittent washouts occuring along passenger and freight rail routes in the interior.

The battle against flood waters was in the crucial stage today in Kamloops as thousands of volunteers hauled sandbags and employed heavy trucks loaded with rockfill to reinforce dikes along the river's edge.

The dikes have so far held back the Thompson, which is swollen by rain and mountain runoff, and civil defence workers are hopeful the dikes will continue to hold against the raging flood, which they expect to peak later today.

Kamloops radio stations advertised today for Manpower to work on dikes and all available personnel were directed to trouble spots by volunteers manning round-the-clock

SOCRED LEAGUE ALSO IN DOUBT

A. H. Hall, registrar of companies, said it is the fact that the BCTF uses delegates to do its business at annual meetings and regular meetings that makes its actions contrary to the Societies Act and an amendment to it passed by the legislature in 1961.

George Driediger, Social Credit League president, said from Abbotsford today the Social Credit League also uses delegates to do its business at annual meetings.

Driediger said about 500 delegates usually attend the annual meetings, representing members of local associations who he said obviously number more than 500.

The 1961 amendment to the Societies Act stipulates that the number of non-voting members — and this would apply to those members of an organization who do not attend the annual meeting — shall not exceed the number of voting members — those who do attend the annual meeting.

The Social Credit League file in the registry of companies shows the most recent report as that for 1970.

Names of directors are listed and the number of voting members is listed as eight and the number of non-voting members zero.

Barrett Blames WAC for 'Fear'

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett today charged Premier Bennett with deliberately creating the "atmosphere" of fear which resulted in a physical attack on cabinet ministers in New Westminster last Wednesday.

Barrett said he is personally satisfied that the violence was "spontaneous" and not prearranged by any organization.

The NDP leader charged that the premier "thrives on strife, conflict and confrontation."

He called Bennett's policy one of "hating people and groups" because Bennett finds it a "useful political weapon" with which to fight for his waning personal political power.

"At least one cabinet minister was injured when the cabinet ran a gauntlet of swinging placards outside the Royal Towers Hotel following a cabinet meeting at which a back-to-work order was decreed.

Bennett said later the province will not be governed by what he called "mob rule" of the kind demonstrated in the incident.

Barrett today called that a "fatuous statement."

He said he had made at least wto personal enquiries from sources he would not reveal, and declared he was "personally satisfied that there was no conscious plan for that violence.

25% Families Earn Less Than $5,000–MacEachen

By ERIC DOWNTON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Almost a quarter of Canada's families exist on incomes of below $5,000 a year according to the most recently available government statistics, the Commons was informed Monday.

In written replies to questions from Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey-White Rock) Privy Council president Allan MacEachen said 24.8 per cent of Canadian families had incomes less than $5,000 yearly, while 66.6 per cent received less than $10,000 yearly.

These figures included income from investments and government transfer payments as well as income from employment, MacEachen said. The most recent figures available on incomes were for 1969.

Mather had also asked if the government had information on the estimated income which would provide a modest but adequate Canadian standard of living for a family of four.

NO CONCEPT

"There is no existing official statistical concept of poverty in Canada," MacEachen replied.

"However, Statistics Canada has established low-income cut-offs which have been used to delineate low-income families from other units. For a family of four in 1969, the income cutoff was set at $4,420.

"In its report, the Special Senate Committee on Poverty has recommended that basic allowance rates be set initially at $5,500 for a family of four," MacEachen stated.

RANGE LISTED

"Among provincially established social assistance programs in January 1972 the annual rate of benefits for a family of four ranged from $2,904 in Nova Scotia to $3,252 in Ontario.

"Also, under the proposed Family Income Security Plan, a family of four, depending on whether there are two or

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel reported that its American-made F-4 Phantoms shot down two Egyptian MiG-21s in a dogfight over the Mediterranean Sea today. But Cairo said the victory was by the Egyptians and that two Israeli planes were downed.

GOLD MAKES COMEBACK

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold jumped $2 — to $63.75 — at the opening of Europe's free bullion markets today, apparently headed back to last week's record high. The United States dollar slumped to its floor level in Paris and moved down in other foreign exchanges.

MORE U.K. TROOPS

BELFAST (UPI) — Militant Protestants put five demands to Britain today as their price for calling off a threatened showdown with British troops that could spark the worst violence yet in Northern Ireland.

The Irish Republican Army stepped up its bombing campaign today in a resurgence of violence that has claimed 12 lives in the past week.

William Whitelaw, the secretary of state for Northern Ireland, reacted to the increased turmoil by announcing he was sending another battalion of 550 British troops to Northern Ireland to bring the total there to more than 15,000.

The IRA, today also offered to call a one week ceasefire if Whitelaw would meet them to discuss a peace plan.

Among the Protestant demands are that U.K. troops invade IRA "no go" areas in Londonderry and the IRA barricades be smashed. Whitelaw is to meet the Protestants later today.

Ottawa $ Heading West

OTTAWA (CP) — Supply Minister James Richardson plans to spread annual government expenditures of almost $1 billion to give Atlantic and Western Canada a bigger piece of the action.

During the budget debate in the Commons Monday, the minister said his new policy is designed to reduce the concentration of government spending in Ontario and Quebec.

National spending in the Atlantic provinces would jump to 10 per cent from six and in the West to 22 per cent from 20.

The policy has yet to be approved by cabinet but it is unlikely the minister would announce it if he was not assured of approval.

Richardson spoke on the fifth of the six days of debate on the budget introduced by Finance Minister John Turner May 8.

Richardson said his new policy follows "a budget suggesting national unity has "a great deal to do with equality of opportunity" for Canadians. His new policy would promote equality for those who wanted to sell to the government.

His policy had three objectives:

—Tendered prices would be for the point of manufacture rather than the point of delivery as a present, eliminating the transportation advantage of central Canadian producers shipping to Ottawa.

Richardson, a former Winnipeg investment dealer, said Quebec and Ontario now supply about 84 per cent of government needs.

The object of the new policy was to reduce spending, in Quebec to 25 per cent from 40 and in Ontario to 35 per cent from the present 44 per cent.

Police examine ripped-out cargo door.

Jetliner Damaged

Times News Services

DETROIT — Passengers and crew of an American Airlines DC-10 had a hair-raising brush with death Monday night when a cargo door popped open at 12,000 feet.

The jetliner, flying between Los Angeles and New York, managed to land safely at Detroit Metropolitan Airport although the huge jet ran off a runway during the emergency landing.

All 56 passengers and 11 crew members escaped serious injury.

The "decompression explosion" was at first attributed to a bomb but subsequent investigation by FBI made it clear there was no evidence of an explosive device being aboard.

An airline official, George A. Warde, said in a statement the cargo door below the passenger cabin opened after the plane left Detroit although signal lights in the cockpit indicated all doors were closed and latched normally.

'Understand The Workers'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Labor strife in British Columbia can be headed off by understanding the needs of workers — and it is far more than big pay cheques, a Minnesota personnel expert said in Victoria today.

Dr. Herbert G. Heneman said giant confrontations are the result of pent-up hostilities because the individual needs of workers have been overlooked over a long period of time.

"Employers make a mistake if they think the only thing an employee wants is more money. There could be any number of things bothering him."

★ ★ ★

He said labor troubles across the United States and the confrontations with woodworkers and construction workers in B.C. could be prevented by a new approach to industrial relations.

This would feature taking surveys of what your own employees want from the company in terms of working conditions and job satisfaction, he said.

Too often a company will try in Victoria what some other firm is doing in New York or Toronto.

"Instead of borrowing ideas from the east, employers should look inside their own plants for ideas — from the workers themselves," he said.

Dr. Heneman is chairman of the University of Minnesota's Industrial Relations Centre. He is in Victoria to conduct a one-day seminar for personnel managers at the University of Victoria.

A panel also participating in the seminar consisted of George Wheaton, contractor; Gordon Winter of B.C. Forest Products, Mary Henderson of Woodward Stores Ltd., and Terry Fitzpatrick, city of Victoria personnel manager.

Dr. Henneman said personnel management is the fastest-growing profession next to teaching.

And research, he said, is its number one need. An employer could be spending up to $2,000 per employee on fringe benefits — holidays, medical plans, etc, — and only an average $1 per employee on research.

"That's like betting 2,000 to 1 on voodoo and witchcraft. Research is the key to industrial relations and it is the part that is being overlooked."

He said the payoffs for employers for listening to the needs of workers would be high morale and higher profits.

Pollen, Savage Clash Over One-Way Plan

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen and Ald. Clyde Savage crossed swords today on the question of whether city council should introduce one-way traffic systems in Government and Wharf Streets on a trial basis.

Pollen insisted the scheme would be no more than a short-term solution to traffic congestion in that area, and that council should be looking at a total traffic plan for Victoria.

But Savage said no one would know if the conversion to one-way traffic in the two streets would be a success until it was tried, and the situation was serious enough to warrant immediate action.

"We're hardly moving cars at all there now," he said. "The cars are here — we've got to do something with them."

The suggestion to make Wharf one-way southbound and Government one-way northbound came to council's public works committee today from the Central Business District Advisory Committee, as endorsement of a view originally put forward by the Downtown Business Association.

When Savage moved that a recommendation for approval go to council, Pollen countered with the suggestion that the Advisory Planning Commission should first be asked for its views.

The mayor said all the proposal would achieve would be to move traffic 18 per cent faster, and improve matters for the next two to three years.

"I think we should have an overview of the whole traffic situation and not just look at this in isolation,' he said.

Unconvinced, Savage pointed out that the city's experts in the traffic department had come out in favor of one-way traffic to reduce congestion in the area, where the "damnable problem" was left turns at traffic lights.

Pollen then turned his guns on the provincial government, saying there has been no indication of its plans on dispersal of government office accommodation and other important matters which would affect the preparation of a comprehensive traffic and transportation study.

"We have no dialogue, no communication whatsoever," he said, noting that the Capital Regional Board has received no reply to its proposal to take over B.C. Hydro bus services in Greater Victoria.

The proposal to make Wharf and Government one-way streets was finally referred to council's committee of the whole.

CITY PLANNERS REJECT HOTEL BID

Victoria's planning committee today endorsed a planning department recommendation to reject a rezoning application for a proposed 80-room hotel at Hillside and Doncaster.

A report from the city planner said the zoning change sought was not compatible with council's policy on suburban commercial uses permitted in the general area of the Hillside shopping centre.

Concern was also expressed at the meeting that the 81 parking spaces provided would be inadequate if all the hotel's facilities, including banqueting rooms and beer parlor, were used to capacity.

Devotion Pays Off 8 Times

Eight healthy ducklings out of 10 eggs isn't bad, mother, wherever you are.

That's the score at the SPCA shelter today and the beady-eyed little quackers splashing about there don't even know how dicey their arrival was.

They owe their mum a lot but she isn't around to tell them.

The great big drills came nearer and nearer — but she wouldn't budge. At last, SPCA Inspector Don Adams had to move the nest to safety. For the hen mallard it was the last straw. She took off.

Determined that all that devotion wasn't going to be wasted, Adams took the eggs home to his incubator. Late Sunday they began hatching and now the ducklings are cavorting in their own pen at the SPCA, with their own swimming pool and a diet of algae water and ground-up water bugs.

Four to six weeks from now when they are feathered, the ducks will be released in some sheltered location like Beacon Hill Park.

Meanwhile Adams has had to contend with some crank phone calls, one as late as midnight. One woman demanded to know what he was going to get out of the whole business "besides a duck dinner."

Saanich Set to Use New Housing Measures

If there is any opportunity at all in proposed federal housing amendments, "Saanich will be on board, Mayor Hugh Curtis promised today.

Although lack of details at this point makes it hard to speculate, the mayor commented in broad terms on proposals introduced Monday by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford.

Curtis said he was particularly interested in financing proposals for the improvement of services, for day care centres, for providing open space and community facilities.

"If this has any application in Saanich we'll be on board, the mayor said.

GOOD RECORD

He observed that the municipality had demonstrated a record of taking part wherever possible in programs of assistance offered by the senior governments.

An important part of Bastoods legislation appears to be the encouragement of rehabilitating or improving communities rather than levelling old buildings to make way for new structures.

The bill would also make funds available for individuals and landlords at preferred rates of interest for improving existing accommodation or for acquisition of homes for those of low income.

"I'm interested is . . . any assistance making it easier for people to get into a home, improve it or to stay in that home," Curtis said. Such aid is "positive legislation."

He noted that president Desmond Newman, of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, hoped there would be consultation with the municipalities on the legislative changes.

Curtis, who is a director of the federation, said he agreed with Newman and expects the CFMM will canvass its directorate.

Aid to municipalities for provision of services would be most welcome in Saanich, the mayor felt.

"In a municipality such as Saanich, because we are so large in land area, and with an almost unbelievable increase in auto traffic, we are lagging in sidewalk construction programs," Curtis said.

The rehabilitation sections he thought would be more applicable to older, more concentrated cities rather than the suburban type of situation.

Curtis felt the parts relating to home acquisition for those of low income levels were fine as far as that goes, but he added:

"What is needed is low-interest loans for most prospective homeowners. Moderate income people are finding it very difficult to get started when you are talking about 9½ and 10 per cent interest and higher.

"One of the continuing tragedies facing young people today is getting into their first home and out of rental accommodation," Curtis said.

The mayor also voiced some caution, noting that 1972 is an election year:

Ask The Times

Q. Must go-kart track operators limit the speed of the cars. If so, what is the maximum? A.M.

A. Go-karts are unlicenced vehicles that do not travel on public roads. Therefore, the motor vehicles branch doesn't restrict their operation. The only go-kart operator in Victoria is the Capital City Go-Kart Club which holds races every Saturday afternoon at Western Speedway.

Mayor Townsend, secretary of the club, said the object of the races is to break previous speed records so there are no speed limits. She said some of the go-karts travel at over 100 miles an hour and some in the United States even faster.

Q. Why did old-time sailors wear gold ear-rings in their left ear? — G.C.

A. Sailors wore ear-rings if they had survived a wreck, or if they had rounded Cape Horn under sail.

Grassroots Planning Recommended for City

If Victoria is to avert "disaster" in future development, local communities must have a say in the over-all planning process, city council's planning committee was told today.

A brief submitted by the James Bay Community Association urged the establishment of "local area commissions," representing identifiable local areas such as James Bay and Victoria West, to work in conjunction with the city's Advisory Planning Commission.

The association said the seven-member commissions, appointed by the mayor and council, should consist of residents from the area including businessmen, students, housewives, pensioners, and representatives of local citizens' and ratepayers' groups.

"Terms of reference for the commissions would be to provide feed-back from the area concerned regarding planning matters referred to them by city council; to communicate with the areas' residents and to recommend, from time to time, studies that would assist council in its planning decision," the brief stated.

"Planning matters which would normally require the attention of the existing Advisory Planning Commission would then be simultaneously referred to the local area commission representing that area directly."

Both bodies would report their views to council, which would be able to "balance the neighborhood's view with the concerns of the whole community."

Without such a system in operation, the brief said, the city's development will continue to be planned by people who are unfamiliar with local areas' specific problems.

Another recommendation in the brief was that the Advisory Planning Commission's terms of reference should be enlarged to allow it to serve as "an architectural review board, providing council with advice as to the esthetic worth of projects as well as technical advice."

The association also said it is "vitally necessary to the spirit involving the citizenry more directly in the planning process" that the APC's proceedings should be open to the press.

Sam Bawlf, chairman of the association's planning committee, was told by Ald. Clyde Savage that there was "a lot of merit" in the proposals, but planning committee chairman Ald. Mike Young was doubtful whether local commissions could be set up as separate entities.

Young also expressed fears that the proposed process might lead to an even greater "plethora" of reports than are now produced.

Alderman 'Fair' After Heart Attack

Esquimalt Ald. Jack Gourlay, 48, is in fair condition this morning in Royal Jubilee Hospital after suffering a heart attack Friday afternoon.

A spokesman for the alderman said Gourlay was being examined by Dr. Reginald Forth, a consultant in heart diseases, when the attack occurred. Dr. Forth called an ambulance and Gourlay was rushed to the nearby hospital.

Gourlay, a B.C. Hydro employee, was elected to Esquimalt council last year and is chairman of the municipality's parks, playgrounds and boulevards sub-committee.

Then Guess What She's Going to Do . . .

WE HAVE A DO-IT-YOURself lady in this town who paused in a renovating chore a while ago to seek professional advice about bathroom showers. The supplier whom she phoned was more than merely courteous. He made her feel downright good. But he was involved with a customer at the moment: could he call her back or would she prefer to hang on?

Having hit a live one, our matron didn't want to lose him. A second or two later she became aware that the receiver she had parked atop of her recipe file was loosing a trickle of conversation into her kitchen.

"Most people are pretty nice to deal with," the man who knew about showers was saying to his customer, "but every so often you run into a real stinker. When that happens, I remember some advice my boss gave me when I was a young salesman."

The lady could have given him some advice too, which is to remember that telephones transmit vocies even when the receiver is a safe-seeming distance from the mouth. She listened, all ears.

"On my first day, he told me that along with the nice people I would meet some real so-and-so's. I was to listen to them, be polite to them, and treat them as if they were human beings. Then, as soon as I was clear of someone like that, I was to turn around and spit. It would relieve my feelings. I've done that ever since — and do you know, he was right!"

It also sounded like wise advice to the scout who sought, and got, cheerfully-delivered information about showers.

"I intend to treat the next sourpuss I meet like a human being," says she. "Then guess what I'm going to do."

This one should go to the tune of 'Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head'. It concerns 15 hard-working men and women from Arbutus Crafts for the Disabled, who weren't robbed of their last-Saturday treat by a touch of inclement weather.

The Arbutus Craft wheelchair set was due for a tour of lovely Butchart Gardens, an undertaking that required something special in the way of arrangements.

A corps of wheelchair pushers was needed. No problem there — a call to Principal Gordon Taylor of Mount Newton Junior Secondary school did the trick. Fifteen student volunteers offered to plow their Saturday into wheelchair piloting duty.

The day came, and with it the rain. Perhaps the tour should be postponed until the weather mended. But the workers would be disappointed, and the students of the volunteer squad weren't to be daunted by weeping skies.

The tour proceeded, wheelchair riders protected by umbrellas, the kids with raindrops falling on their heads. Today, I'm asked to pass on the Arbutus Crafters' warmest thanks to their student pilots.

"They were wonderful," the message runs, "and they helped make it a day to remember."

David Groos, MP for Victoria, has sounded his own grim warnings about the oil trouble our coast may be in for if the Valdez-Cherry Point tanker route is adopted in spite of Canadian protests. Last week, with the Cherry Point spill to underline his argument, Groos urged an improved system of in-harbor oil handling.

"Loading and off-loading could be made into much safer operations, he told me, "if tankers were worked into tidal basins, as they are in European ports. That's the way the operation should be conducted on this coast."

Any spillage from a tanker isolated in this fashion can be contained and mopped up within the basin. Neighboring shorelines and inshore waters don't bear the brunt of a spill.

That's it, and off now for a ceremonial burning of surplus paper, including one of Canada's more impressive collections of rejection slips. Heartbreakers all — and why did I ever save them?

MISERABLE MONDAY BROKE CHILLY RECORD

A miserable day Monday?

The weatherman said today maximum temperature was a chilly 54 degrees.

The previous low was in 1952 when it was 57. Normal temperature for the day, said the weatherman, is 65.

And the forecast is no great shakes. In the next few days, the weatherman said the temperature will stay in the low 60s.

Russia to Buy Dairy Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Hereford Association says it has made the largest cattle sale in it history to the Soviet Union and the first involving dairy cattle.

The transaction involves 1,635 purebred beef and dairy cattle for more than $800,000 with shipment to be made between August and October, an association spokesman said Monday.

The sale was agreed to in Ottawa by the cattle group and the agriculture wing of the Russian sales importing agency, V-O Prodentorg.

The beef cattle are to be obtained mainly from farms in Alberta and Saskatchewan and perhaps some from Ontario, said Dwayne Jones, director of the association.

"The Russians' large order means we'll have to do some digging," he said.

Of the 985 beef animals in the sale, 900 are to be Herefords and 85 Aberdeen Angus. All 650 dairy cattle will be Holsteins.

MDs Hike Fees

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Medical Association's revised fee schedule has been mailed to members throughout the province. The revision, the first since 1967, provides increases for general practitioners and some specialists on the lower side of the medical profession's income scale.

A spokesman said the additional cost would total about $2.5 million, about five per cent of the current bill to Manitobans for medical services.

Open Line Queried

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Court of Appeal reserved judgment Monday in the case of Regina lawyer Tony Merchant who was ordered by the Law Society of Saskatchewan to discontinue his open-line radio broadcasts.

Merchant earlier lost a bid before Court of Queen's Bench to get an order quashing the society's directive. He is appealing that ruling. The law society's benchers claim that Merchant is in contravention of the groups ethics by dispensing legal opinion on the show and thereby engaging in advertising.

Election Predicted

EDMONTON (CP) — Grant Notley, Alberta New Democratic Party leader, said Monday the Alberta government will call a provincial election within 18 months in an attempt to destroy the Social Credit party.

Notley said in an interview the "federal aspirations" of Premier Peter Lougheed and other Progressive Conservative Party members also will influence the decision. The NDP leader was starting a provincial campaign to rally support for his party which he hopes will become the official opposition in the next election.

Mother of Missing Child Fired From Night Club Job

VANCOUVER (CP) — The mother of Tanya Busch, the seven-year-old Vancouver girl missing since June 2, has been fired from her job as manager of a downtown night club.

Mrs. Ingrid Busch has worked for the Barn Cabaret restaurant since last August.

"I would gladly have taken a leave of absence if the club doesn't want to pay me," Mrs. Busch said Monday. "It does seem harsh to fire me at a time like this."

In his letter to Mrs. Busch, G. Robert Reeds, the club's principal shareholder, said "a number of internal developments, including outside reports from customers ... make it necessary that we go along with your publicly announced preference not to return to work."

Mrs. Busch said the letter remark probably refers to a statement published in a newspaper here in which she said she didn't think she could return to her job.

She is presently under a doctor's care, and has been prescribed tranquillizers during the nine-day vigil since her child went missing.

Fraud Doubted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The department of rehabilitation and social improvement tried to have a woman, charged with a $7,050 welfare fraud, settle for paying back $1,000 to keep the case out of court, a welfare supervisor testified Monday. But Helen Leona MacKenrot, 55, was acquitted of the charge in city court when Judge G. O. Stewart ruled he doubted she intended to defraud the department. Welfare supervisor Eugene Hoogstraten testified the department had asked Mrs. MacKenrot to pay the $1,000 to spare the trial and publicity.

ROSSLAND (CP) — Vivian Caroline Boulter, 27, of Penticton was sentenced in assize court Monday to 4½ years in prison for possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking. She is already serving two years in prison for possession of heroin. The new sentence will be served concurrently.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Quebec couple on a cross-Canada cycling tour pleaded guilty in provincial court Monday of shoplifting and were ordered to enrich the court's coffers by $250 from their joint travelling fund.

Pauline Provencher, 20, of Three Rivers, and Yvan Bruneau, 24, of the Quebec City suburb of Laval, tood a 49-cent bicycle repair kit, a 49-cent wrench, pant clips worth 78 cents and a $22 jacket from The Bay Saturday.

Bruneau had $600, the pair's travel money, when they were arrested.

Judge William Ostler fined Bruneau $250, and told him he was "sorry the way the trip had turned out."

He gave Miss Provencher a suspended sentence and placed her on six months' probation, after noting that the couple had already spent two days in jail and had just about enough money left after Bruneau's fine to get back to Quebec.

A woman who switched price tags on two belts in a department store was fined $250 after she was found guilty following trial on a charge of attempted fraud.

Linda Iwanik, 22, of 1030 Linden, was given two months to pay the fine.

The accused switched tags between belts priced at $5 and $6. She told a store security officer she had done it "to save the dollar."

The offence occurred at The Bay, March 25.

John D. Hatten, 16, of 2722 Shelbourne, was sentenced to five months definite and seven months indeterminate for theft involving more than $50.

Hatten, who stole 16 long-playing records from The Bay, first appeared in juvenile court and was elevated to adult criminal court.

Judge Ostler said a pre-sentence report showed the accused started using drugs at the age of 14 and at 16 was a heroin user. The judge said he "pitied" Hatten as the product of a broken home.

Ostler said he would recommend that the juvenile spend his term in the Boulder Bay forestry program of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

The accused told a probation officer he had started using drugs because he was bored with life.

Donald McCrory, 46, was charged with driving while impaired June 11 in Colwood, where he was stopped for speeding after a one-mile police chase. He also was charged with failing to provide a breath sample for a blood-alcohol test at the Colwood RCMP station.

Brad Takes Sprint

BURNABY — Victoria star Brad Yakubowich and two former Victorians now attending university elsewhere won events Sunday at the 24th annual Open Vancouver Relays at Simon Fraser University.

Yakubowich, in Grade 11 at Mt. Douglas and B.C. high school sprint champion, again beat arch rival Albin Dukoski to take first place in the open men's 100 metres.

Yakubowich raced over the finish line in 10.8 seconds for his second win in a week over the Vancouver College ace.

Bob McLaren, now attending Oregon State University, won the 400-metrees, in 54.3 seconds and Murray Keating, formerly of Mt. Doug and now at SFU, topped the hammer throw with a heave of 187 feet 11¾ inches.

Other Victorians fared well in the field events as veteran Roger Ruth placed second in the pole vault and Lorna McHattie was runner-up in the discus, and third in both the javelin and shotput.

Patty Loverock of Vancouver equalled the meet record as she won the women's 100 metres in 11.6 seconds.

Three other Vancouver athletes posted victories in women's events as Brenda Eisler won the long jump, Wendy Taylor took the 100-metre hurdles and Jean Sparling set the pace in the 200-metre hurdles, in which Victoria's Nancy Chamberlayne placed third.

BRILLIANT DISPLAY BY AUSSIE BOWLER

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Dennis Lillee, Australian fast bowler, was brilliant against the English batters Monday, but the Australian tourists retained only an outside chance of beating the host team in the first cricket test match.

Lillee took six wickets for 66, including three in four deliveries in the afternoon as England was all out for 234 in its second innings. With nine hours of play left, Australia needed 342 runs for victory.

Rain began to fall as the English innings ended. After a delay, Australia made 26 for one wicket before rain came again. At the close Australia was 57 for 2 in its second innings. Tony Greig, a lanky South African, was England's outstanding batter in the second innings. He was last man out for 62.

Canucks Start Well

WORTHING, England (CP) — Canada made a promising start in the opening rounds of the singles and fours of the world bowls championships Monday.

The Canadian fours were at one stage leading the 16-team table, but Harry Figg, Canada's singles bowler, lost his rhythm after an early win and suffered two defeats later on.

In the fours, Bob Mackintosh and Jim Watkin of London, Ont., with Sam Caffyn and Robert Leadbetter from Vancouver, enjoyed two convincing wins out of three games.

They beat Malawi 18-12 and Guernsey 24-16. At this point Canada was ahead of the remainder of the field in the fours. Later, however, the Canadians were unable to sustain their winning streak when Jersey snatched an easy victory against them 24-17.

In the singles, Harry Figg of Edmonton opened proceedings with a neck-and-neck tussle with Jersey which Canada finally won 21-20. Figg lost his other games 21-13 against Guernsey and 21-18 against Malawi. Canada occupies 12th position in the singles table.

89th YEAR No. 4 VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, JUNE 13, 1972 ★★★★ 10 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY

THE DAY THE LIGHTS WENT OFF IN PALERMO

PALERMO, Sicily (UPI) — The federal electric company turned off the lights at city hall today because the city is overdue on its hydro bill to the tune of $1.3 million. Or is it $4.25 million?

Palermo, chronically debt-ridden, disputes the higher figure decided on by a civil court, but cannot prove its case because so many of the bills have been lost.

An aide said Mayor Giacomo Marchello, whose office is in the dark, was "displeased by what has happened."

B.C. Unemployment Up, National Figures Down

Times News Services

Unemployment in British Columbia jumped last month to eight per cent of the provincial labor force. Elsewhere it declined.

Figures released by Statistics Canada Monday show 76,000 people without jobs in this province, compared with 71,000 in April and sharply up from 61,000 in May of last year.

The figures do not include people temporarily out-of-work because of labor disputes.

According to these latest figures, B.C. with 10.1 per cent of the country's population, has 13.7 per cent of the nation's unemployed.

While the national figures are a marked improvement from April, when there were 592,000 people unemployed, the 40,000 removed from the list represents a smaller decline than usual for this time of year when construction and industry normally shift into high gear.

As a result, the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate — which is weighted to take seasonal job fluctuations into account — rose to 6.2 per cent of the labor force for May from 5.8 per cent in April.

The seasonally-adjusted trend has been inconsistent throughout 1972.

The year started with a seasonally-adjusted rate of 6.2 per cent in January, which dropped to 5.8 per cent in February, climbed again to 6.0 per cent in March, then fell to 5.8 per cent in April and bounced back up to 6.2 per cent for May.

The actual rate of unemployment for May — unadjusted to fit into this trend formula — was also 6.2 per cent, down from the unadjusted rate of 6.8 per cent in April and 6.3 per cent in May of last year.

The highest seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in recent years was recorded in September of last year when it hit 6.9 per cent of the national labor force.

One positive aspect of the May report was that the number of hard-core unemployed declined both in absolute and seasonally-adjusted terms.

There were 106,000 persons who had been out of work for seven months or longer in the middle of May, compared to 117,000 in April and 126,000 in May, 1971.

In seasonally-adjusted terms this hard-core group showed a considerable improvement, while the number unemployed for six months or less climbed.

The number of unemployed youthful workers — under age 25 — rose to 269,000 in May from 251,000 in April. It was 270,000 in May last year.

There was a sharp improvement in the unemployment picture for mature workers, particularly men. The number of unemployed men aged 25 and over declined to 219,000 from 270,000 in April.

Times News Services

Flood levels reached the peak of the century today as exhausted volunteers in Kamloops continued efforts to hold back the waters of the raging North Thompson River, which threatens to inundate some 500 homes.

Further North at Prince George, the swollen Nechako River overflowed its banks early today and the Fraser River was four inches above flood level, forcing evacuation of an estimated 150 families from low-lying areas.

Around the Kamloops area, several other communities in the Thompson Valley were threatened by the rising flood waters and scores of families were evacuated Monday from low-lying ground along the North and South Thompson rivers.

Hundreds of cattle were marooned along a 60-mile section of the valley and were in danger of drowning as river waters closed in around them.

Roads and railway lines were also affected, with the Kamloops-Edmonton highway closed and intermittent washouts occuring along passenger and freight rail routes in the interior.

The battle against flood waters was in the crucial stage today in Kamloops as thousands of volunteers hauled sandbags and employed heavy trucks loaded with rockfill to reinforce dikes along the river's edge.

The dikes have so far held back the Thompson, which is swollen by rain and mountain runoff, and civil defence workers are hopeful the dikes will continue to hold against the raging flood, which they expect to peak later today.

Kamloops radio stations advertised today for Manpower to work on dikes and all available personnel were directed to trouble spots by volunteers manning round-the-clock

SOCREDS ALSO VIOLATE ACT

B.C.'s Social Credit League appears to be in a similar situation to the B.C. Teachers' Federation with regard to contravention of the provincial Societies Act. (See Page 2).

A. H. Hall, registrar of companies, said it is the fact that the BCTF uses delegates to do its business at annual meetings and regular meetings that makes its actions contrary to the Societies Act and an amendment to it passed by the legislature in 1961.

George Driediger, Social Credit League president, said from Abbotsford today the Social Credit League also uses delegates to do its business at annual meetings.

Driediger said about 500 delegates usually attend the annual meetings, representing members of local associations who he said obviously number more than 500.

The 1961 amendment to the Societies Act stipulates that the number of non-voting members — and this would apply to those members of an organization who do not attend the annual meeting — shall not exceed the number of voting members — those who do attend the annual meeting.

The Social Credit League file in the registry of companies shows the most recent report as that for 1970.

Names of directors are listed and the number of voting members is listed as eight and the number of non-voting members zero.

Barrett Blames WAC for 'Fear'

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett today charged Premier Bennett with deliberately creating the "atmosphere" of fear which resulted in a physical attack on cabinet ministers in New Westminster last Wednesday.

Barrett said he is personally satisfied that the violence was "spontaneous" and not prearranged by any organization.

The NDP leader charged that the premier "thrives on strife, conflict and confrontation."

He called Bennett's policy one of "hating people and groups" because Bennett finds it a "useful political weapon" with which to fight for his waning personal political power.

At least one cabinet minister was injured when the cabinet ran a gauntlet of swinging placards outside the Royal Towers Hotel following a cabinet meeting at which a back-to-work order was decreed.

Bennett said later the province will not be governed by what he called "mob rule" of the kind demonstrated in the incident.

Barrett today called that a "fatuous statement."

He said he had made at least two personal enquiries from sources he would not reveal, and declared he was "personally satisfied that there was no conscious plan for that violence.

25% Families Earn Less Than $5,000–MacEachen

By ERIC DOWNTON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Almost a quarter of Canada's families exist on incomes of below $5,000 a year according to the most recently available government statistics, the Commons was informed Monday.

In written replies to questions from Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey-White Rock) Privy Council president Allan MacEachen said 24.8 per cent of Canadian families had incomes less than $5,000 yearly, while 66.6 per cent received less than $10,000 yearly.

These figures included income from investments and government transfer payments as well as income from employment, MacEachen said. The most recent figures available on incomes were for 1969.

Mather had also asked if the government had information on the estimated income which would provide a modest but adequate Canadian standard of living for a family of four.

NO CONCEPT

"There is no existing official statistical concept of poverty in Canada," MacEachen replied.

"However, Statistics Canada has established low-income cut-offs which have been used to delineate low-income families from other units. For a family of four, in 1969, the income cutoff was set at $4,420.

"In its report, the Special Senate Committee on Poverty has recommended that basic allowance rates be set initially at $3,500 for a family of four," MacEachen stated.

RANGE LISTED

"Among provincially established social assistance programs in January 1972 the annual rate of benefits for a family of four ranged from $2,604 in Nova Scotia to $3,252 in Ontario.

"Also, under the proposed Family Income Security Plan, a family of four, depending on whether there are two or

MORE U.K. TROOPS

BELFAST (UPI) — Militant Protestants put five demands to Britain today as their price for calling off a threatened showdown with British troops that could spark the worst violence yet in Northern Ireland.

The Irish Republican Army stepped up its bombing campaign today in a resurgence of violence that has claimed 12 lives in the past week.

William Whitelaw, the secretary of state for Northern Ireland, reacted to the increased turmoil by announcing he was sending another battalion of 550 British troops to Northern Ireland to bring the total there to more than 15,000.

The IRA, today also offered to call a one week ceasefire if Whitelaw would meet them to discuss a peace plan.

Among the Protestant demands are that U.K. troops invade IRA "no go" areas in Londonderry and the IRA barricades be smashed. Whitelaw is to meet the Protestants later today.

Ottawa $ Heading West

OTTAWA (CP) — Supply Minister James Richardson plans to spread annual government expenditures of almost $1 billion to give Atlantic and Western Canada a bigger piece of the action.

During the budget debate in the Commons Monday, the minister said his new policy is designed to reduce the concentration of government spending in Ontario and Quebec.

National spending in the Atlantic provinces would jump to 10 per cent from six and in the West to 27 per cent from 10.

The policy has yet to be approved by cabinet but it is unlikely the minister would announce it if he was not assured of approval.

Richardson spoke on the fifth of the six days of debate on the budget introduced by Finance Minister John Turner May 8.

Richardson said his new policy follows a budget suggestion national unity has "a great deal to do with equality of opportunity" for Canadians. His new policy would promote equality for those who wanted to sell to the government.

His policy had three objectives:

—Tendered prices would be for the point of manufacture rather than the point of delivery as a present, eliminating the transportation advantage of central Canadian producers shipping to Ottawa.

Richardson, a former Winnipeg investment dealer, said Quebec and Ontario now supply about 84 per cent of government needs.

The object of the new policy was to reduce spending in Quebec to 25 per cent from 40 and in Ontario to 35 per cent from the present 44 per cent.

Police examine ripped-out cargo door.

Jetliner Damaged

Times News Services

DETROIT — Passengers and crew of an American Airlines DC-10 had a hair-raising brush with death Monday night when a cargo door popped open at 12,000 feet.

The jetliner, flying between Los Angeles and New York, managed to land safely at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport although the huge jet ran off a runway during the emergency landing.

All 56 passengers and 11 crew members escaped serious injury.

The "decompression explosion" was at first attributed to a bomb but subsequent investigation by FBI made it clear there was no evidence of an explosive device being aboard.

An airline official, George A. Warde, said in a statement the cargo door below the passenger cabin opened after the plane left Detroit although signal lights in the cockpit indicated all doors were closed and latched normally.
